Crop Winners Announced At Keystone Farm Show

YORK (York Co.) — Winners of the Pennsylvania Five-Acre Corn Club and Pennsylvania Soybean Yield Contest were announced here at the York Fairgrounds last week during the annual Keystone Farm Show.

Dan Wolf, president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA), noted that of the 103 entries in the corn contest, there were some "notable differences," he said, in cultural practices compared to the 1999 contest. Only 7 of 91 growers used cultivation, with most growers using 30-inch row spacing. The second highest spacing was 38 inches apart.

Wolf noted it is "hard to find significant differences in yield to favor one type of tillage over another," he told those attending the awards presentation at the fairgrounds.

About 44 percent of the contestants use sidedress nitrogen. Average planting depth was 1.7 inches. Corn acres grown by participants numbered 24,242.

For the most part, the year was substantially different in terms of total yield, a vast improvement from the statewide drought of the previous summer. "Some don't appreciate how good of a year it was," Wolf said.

Greg Roth, Penn State corn specialist, noted on the summary that the "2000 season was a welcome improvement over 1999 for many producers," he wrote. "Top yields like this don't happen just by chance. They are the result of careful planning and top-notch management throughout the season."

Before The Internet, There Was The Stockyard

Editor's Note: This series examines the historical and present-day operation of Lancaster Stockyards — the stories, the changes, and the contribution of the stockyards to the economy and the agriculture business. Part one of the three-part series gives an overview of the foundation and growth of the trading center.

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Before computers began to store information, before fax machines sent their first messages, before words zipped through lines as e-mail, and before the Internet became a main information source, business — believe it or not — was conducted.

Founded in 1895, the Union Stock Yard Company, later Lancaster Stockyards, facilitated active livestock trading. The stockyard's original 23 acres, owned by the railroad, included a hotel, office building, and pens. A tunnel under the railroad led to loading and unloading wharves on the south side of the railroad to handle shipments of cattle.

The yards handled the roaring '20s the terrible '30s, the soaring '60s, the addition of the auction, wars and the black market, fires, closing because of hoof and mouth disease, inflation and prosperity, and droughts during its years of business.

Westmoreland County Man Named Bid-Calling Champ

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Randy Benton of Greensburg was given the title of "grand champion bid caller" at the 85th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

The Lehigh Valley Chapter of the Pennsylvania Auctioneers Association welcomed 35 professional auctioneer contestants from across the commonwealth to participate in the Bid Calling Contest and Benefit Auction from which a portion of the proceeds go to the Pennsylvania Farm Show Scholarship Fund.

The competition began on Stage One of the Family Living Center, with words from Dennis Grumbine, Farm Show director, and Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes.

First, the nervous contestants began a warm up round. Next, each contestant was allowed three minutes to auction off two items. After the first round, 10 finalists were selected to auction off two additional items in a three-minute time limit per contestant. The finalists were then

These photos introduce a three-part series on the history of the Lancaster Stockyards. The top photo, with the date "March 14, 1950," shows the pens and alleys of the stockyard with the railroad, which ran adjacent to the yards, in the background. Originally owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad, the "Union Stock Yard Co." was founded in 1895. Before the advent of sale barns, livestock were moved primarily by rail and came to "terminals" such as this one in Lancaster. The bottom photo shows the short-statured cattle reminiscent of that era.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
January 17, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Wheat and soybeans bids finished lower but corn bids rebounded after consecutive days of low closes. Wheat 2 to 6 cents lower. Corn 1 to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 4 cents higher. Soybeans 2 to 5 cents lower.

Wheat bids were lower due to beneficial snow cover over in winter wheat growing areas. Corn bids slightly higher resulted in some fund buying taking place on the Board. Soybeans bids were lower as continued good weather and an increase soybean production for South America. However, overnight export bean sales limited loses.

- No complicated instructions for heating and ventilation in conjunction with application

Bird Set
Poultry Guard can be applied when it's most convenient, up to five days before bird set.
- No application timing headaches between clean out and bird set
- No last minute application after equipment has been lowered

Control Ammonia
Poultry Guard will deliver immediate and long-term ammonia control and give birds a healthier growing environment.
- No more dangerously high levels of ammonia to stunt growth

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

JANUARY 22–28, 2001

CHINESE NEW YEAR, JANUARY 24

NEW MOON SUPERSTITIONS

Whether waxing (increasing) or waning (decreasing), the Moon has figured into our superstitions for centuries. For the first new Moon of 2001 (January 24), we offer a few things to keep in mind. The waxing crescent is lucky for lovers, but to marry during a waning Moon is unlucky. Glance at the new Moon over your right shoulder and you will be lucky; never look at the new Moon through a closed window or over your left shoulder Two new Moons in the same month foretell bad weather, but don't worry, no month in 2001 has more than one. To increase your fortune, bow to the new Moon or jingle silver coins in your pocket when you see it

New Moon, New Moon, star in the stream;
Pray tell my fortune in my dream.

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ If you're trying to quit smoking, chew raw, shelled sunflower seeds. Besides the oral gratification, they may also have some calming effects.

OPINION

Beef Agenda

The Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association has a legislative agenda that we think would benefit all farmers.

Items on their list include:

• Private Property Rights — Legislation protecting private property rights is a top priority as the right to own and use property is fundamental to the American way of life and is vital to beef producers. Work is in progress on legislation that allows for compensation, litigation relief, and no net-loss in private property.

• Death Tax Elimination — Total elimination of the death tax remains a top priority with the new Congress. Significant reductions have already been gained in both the estate and capital gains taxes. Achieving full deductibility of health insurance for the self-employed, like cattlemen, is also a priority tax relief issue.

• Exports — NCBA is working aggressively to gain access to emerging markets. U.S. beef and variety meat exports through August 2000 increased 22 percent in volume and 25 percent in value compared to exports through August 1999.

• Environmental Issues — Working to ensure site-specific, science-based standards for total maximum daily loads, effluent limitation guidelines, CAFO guidelines, and endangered species rules.

• Beef Labeling — NCBA is working to limit the usage of the USDA grade to U.S. cattle only.

We commend the beef farmers on their efforts to make farming more profitable and more free from unnecessary restrictions that hamper the production of food in this country.

Now Is The Time

By John Schwartz

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Recognize Farmland Preservation

A record 83 Lancaster County farms were preserved in 2000. This brings the total of preserved farms in the county to 456, representing more than 37,000 acres.

This is a great success story of two organizations working together to make this happen.

The Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board, formed in 1980, handles the county and state funds appropriated for farmland preservation. This past year saw a large increase in both county and state funds available for farmland preservation.

The Lancaster Farmland Trust formed in 1988 is a private, nonprofit organization that uses tax incentives to encourage farmers to donate their easements to the trust. In addition to preserving 83 farms this year, the Agricultural Preserve Board received more than 120 additional applications in September 2000.

This demonstrates that farmland preservation has become a legitimate and viable option for county farmers. By preserving farms, we are insuring the future of the county's agriculture. It demonstrates the county's support and optimism that agriculture will be a very important part of the county's economy. It is important to protect our farmland in the East, because we are one of the few areas in this country that can sustain agriculture because of our soils and climate.

To Realize The Importance Of Preserving Farms

Lancaster County, Pennsylvania and Portland, Ore. shows the importance and impact a strong farmland preservation program has on the area.

By using urban growth boundaries and farmland preservation techniques, these two areas have seen strong agricultural growth along with an increase in population.

However, these areas have used less land to accomplish this growth than similar metropolitan areas. Also, these similar metropolitan areas have seen a decline in their agricultural production. As Ron Bailey, director of the Lancaster County Planning Commission, reports, growth is not bad, but how we plan for growth is the key. By keeping farmland surrounding communities instead of communities surrounding farmland is what helps to keep farming growing in a county.

By preserving farmland we are planning for the farm business to last more than one generation. This allows farmers to make the long-term investments needed to keep their farms profitable. It also allows public officials to develop public policy to encourage and support agriculture in their areas. Farmland preservation is planning for the future and the sustainability of our farms and our country.

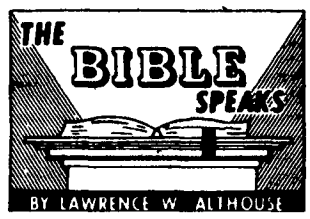
To Form Ag Security Areas

If you are not in an Agricultural Security Area and plan on farming, you should seriously consider forming or joining an Agricultural Security Area.

The Agricultural Security Area gives farmers additional protection to conduct their farming operations. An Agricultural Security Area does not limit land use options to the farmer or place any restrictions on his deed. The area designation informs people that agriculture is the primary use of land and government is to promote agriculture by enacting ordinances that support and encourage agriculture.

With the increasing populations in rural areas, township supervisors are being forced to consider ordinances that will limit the sustainability and profitability of farms. Now is the time to work with other farmers in your township and form Agricultural Security Areas to insure the future of farming in your township.

Feather Prof's Footnote: "Success does not come to you. You must go get it."



THE PRODIGAL FATHER

Background Scripture:
Luke 15.
Devotional Reading:
Ephesians 1:15-22.

No, that is not a typographical or editorial mistake in the title. I really mean to think with you about the Prodigal Father, not the Prodigal Son.

Actually, I think this well-known parable of Jesus may well be misnamed. Perhaps they key is to be found in the meaning of the word "prodigal." Apart from this parable, it is seldom used in our society today and perhaps that is why we have such a limited concept of what it means.

When we call the youth in this story the "Prodigal Son," what do we mean by the term "prodigal?" My Thesaurus suggests the following: "extravagant," "wasteful," "improvident," "profligate," "spendthrift" and "excessive." That is a pretty good description of this young man, isn't it?

Luke says "he squandered his property in loose living" (13b). But the adjective "prodigal" does not have to be a negative description, for my Thesaurus also suggests some positive synonyms, too: "free," "prodigious," "open-handed," "unselfish," "bountiful," "profuse," and "copious."

Applying "prodigal" to the love of the father for his wayward son indicates that his love was more bountiful than the failures of his son. The Father was a greater forgiver than the son was a sinner. Yes, the Father's love was extravagant, beyond any legal or ethical claim. Another name for it is "grace" — God's amazing grace that makes it possible to return to the Father's house.

Going Home Again

Two years ago I was invited to return to and preach at my last pastorate in Pennsylvania. Naturally, though I realized that there had been changes since I left, I regarded this as a homecoming. But I was unprepared for the congregation I faced that Sunday morning — here and there a familiar face or family. But for the most part, it was hardly the congregation I remembered.

I was reminded of Thomas Wolfe's famous novel, "You Can't Go Home Again." For much of life that is certainly true: you cannot go home again and find it just as you left it.

Yet, this parable tells us that there is one sense in which we can always go home again. No matter how much time had elapsed, how he had squandered his inheritance, and how "loose" his living had been, the younger son was able not only to head home again but was welcomed with open arms. The Father had not come after him to drag him back, for the decision to return would have to be his own. Luke tells us that in the midst of his degradation, the son "came to himself and said, 'How many of my father's hired servants have bread enough and to spare, but I perish here with hunger?'" (17).

The Jerusalem Bible, Phillips, New English Bible, and Moffatt all translate 15:17 as "then he came to his senses." Isn't it strange how, when he are caught up in an obsession with self-gratification, we behave in such a nonsensical manner so contrary to the best that we know? It is as if we become temporarily insane. But, like the younger son, we can also come to our senses and realize that we can always go home again to the Father's house.

Turning Around

Now we might wish Jesus had pictured the younger son as conscience-stricken and repentant. Maybe he was, but Luke doesn't tell us. He just says that the son at last realizes how much better off he would be in his father's house, even as a servant.

You might decide that he wasn't really repentant, but was smart enough to know what he had to do to get out of the hole into which he had dug himself. If that is the most we can say about him, I would still have to say "good for him," for some people don't even have enough gumption to turn away from their profligacy and begin the trip back home. Instead of turning toward home, they dig in their heels and wait for the world to change instead.

When I read Robert Ardrey's book, "The Territorial Imperative," I remember him telling of the bird known as the Manx shearwater that was captured on Skokholm Island off the coast of Wales and flown by jet plane to Harvard University to be studied. But arriving in Boston, the shearwater flew 3,050 miles across the Atlantic and, maintaining a speed of 244 miles per day, arrived back at Skokholm Island 12 and one-half days later.

God has also given us the same gift of grace. As John Newton wrote the familiar hymn, "Amazing Grace":

" 'Tis grace that brought me safe thus far,
And grace will lead me home."

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State University
January 12, 2001

U.S. Economy Shows Signs of Slowing

- Growth up 2 2 percent in 3rd quarter
- Demand for dairy products strong for now
- Cheese prices this week weaken

The one good thing during 2000 that dairy producers and processors could count on was a strong U S. economy. For most of the year inflation and unemployment were low and the economy grew at a rate of between 2-5 percent each quarter

When people are employed, feel confident about their job and are making more money, they tend to buy more dairy products. People are busy and have money in their pocket. Therefore they are more likely to eat outside of the home. When that occurs, consumption of dairy products like cheese, butter, and ice cream increases.

Be Ready For Whatever Old Man Winter Dishes Up

NEWARK, Del. — Severe winter storms can keep you from doing your regular food shopping, or knock out gas or electric power, making it difficult to prepare meals at home.

But you can be ready for anything Old Man Winter dishes up with a little advance planning and an "emergency pantry" of canned and packaged goods, said Maria Pippidis, family and consumer sciences educator for University of Delaware Cooperative Extension.

According to Pippidis, stockpiling nutritious foods for use during weather emergencies is easy and a real help when you can't prepare meals as usual. Here are her tips for combining good nutrition with easy preparation:

• Buy foods that have an extended shelf life; check use-by dates.

• Date containers at the time of purchase and rotate emergency foods into the regular food supply to prevent them getting beyond their use-by date.

• To ensure protein intake, include canned tuna, chicken, Vienna sausages, spaghetti with meat sauce, baked beans, peanut butter and evaporated milk. Also, soy protein mixes (you just add water and stir) are good sources of protein.

• For fiber and carbohydrates, stock up on canned fruits and applesauce, vegetables, stewed tomatoes, securely packaged whole-grain crackers and cereals, canned or packaged soups and potatoes.

• Beverages should include bottled water, instant milk or shelf milk and canned, ready-to-use juices.

• Add some bottled catsup, mustard, mayonnaise, relish and canned seasonings.

"Don't forget to add a hand-operated can opener and non-perishables such as paper plates and cups and plastic forks and spoons, toilet paper, and paper towels," Pippidis advised. "For outages, keep batteries, a flashlight, matches and candles handy, and your emergency pantry will be complete."

weather, there were some stress factors that affected yields. Cool weather limited grain fill in some cases. In others, stalk lodging was severe. A dry August for some put a "ceiling on yield performance," Roth wrote.

Also, in the Pennsylvania Soybean Yield Contest for 2000, the year was really good, noted John Yocum, manager of the Penn State Southeast Research Laboratory near Landisville.

The top yield was 70.58 bushels per acre harvested by Steve and Jeff Reigel, Annville. The Reigels used Garst D398 seed. The Reigels win a trip to the Commodity Classic for 2002.

Second place went to Shoop Farms, Milton, with a yield of 67.84 bushels per acre using NK 366, a Roundup Ready variety.

Third went to Gary Truckenmiller, Wastsontown, with a yield of 67.55 bushels per acre using Pioneer 93B53, a Roundup Ready variety.

In general areas of the state, for some reason, soybeans did not respond the way the corn did to improved weather compared to the previous year, according to Yocum.

But the Landisville farm manager noted that a big element to the contest was the use of many Roundup Ready cultivars by a great percentage of the 24 entrants.

Those who harvested 60 bushels or more received a "60-bushel club" plaque. They included the top three award winners in addition to Kyle L. Henninger, Lehigh County; Jack Coleman, Lancaster County; Daryl L. Beiler, Lycoming County; Robert E. More, Lycoming County; Eric D. Moser, Northumberland County; Floyd Kurtz, Berks County; James R. Hoover, Perry County; and Stephan J. Mellott, Franklin County.

The contest is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Soybean Promotion Board. For more information about participating in the contest, contact Yocum at P.O. Box 308, Landisville, PA 17538, (717) 653-4728.

In Class II, Terri Johnson, York, York County, was first, Amanda Stanton, Everett, Bedford County, was second, and Nathan Phillips, Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County, was third.

In Class III, Charran Foster, Petersburg, Huntington County, was first, Melissa Wolfe, Northumberland, Northumberland County, was second, and Andy Stoner, Waynesboro, Franklin County, was third.

In Class IV, Jason Mowry, Roaring Springs, Bedford County, was first, Susan Richardson, Fawn Grove, York County, was second, and Erica Lloyd, Pottstown, Chester County, was third.

Dutch Belt Cattle Contribute To BueLingo Breed

BARNESVILLE, Ohio — The curlicue horn shape of a Texas Longhorn cow and the polka dotted pattern of an Appaloosa horse create a unique calling card. Even more extreme but less known is the big white belt encircling the midsection of every BueLingo cow.

This Dutch beef breed can have black, red, gray or gold coats, yet each one has a complete full circle white belt that wraps totally around the midsection. Normally, no other white markings are visible.

The BueLingo Cattle Society, formed in 1989, is the official registry for this eye catching critter. Although few are aware of this relatively young composite breed, its sketchily recorded history is truly ancient in origin.

Dutch Belted cattle originated in Holland prior to the 17th century. Historic documentation indicates Dutch nobility pursued development of these special cattle for hundreds of years. Select breed guidelines of performance, conformation, milk quality, minimal grain consumption, and the striking full circle belt were all essential.

Generations of royalty worked for hundreds of years to produce belted cattle, rabbits, goats, poultry and swine. As a result of these genetic challenges there were creations of Dutch Belted Rabbits, Dutch Belted Goats, Dutch Belted Dairy Cattle, Lakenvelder poultry of England and America, Lanche Swine of Holland, and Hampshire hogs of America. Hampshire swine are said to have originated in Hampshire, England, but the earlier historic connection easily traces beyond England to a Netherlands birth.

Dutch Swine, fowl and rabbits came early to America but the first recorded importation of Dutch Belted cattle was made in 1838 by the U.S. consul of Holland, D.H. Haight. In 1840, master showman P.T. Barnum imported a specimen breeding group to the United States. They were selected from a premier herd developed by one of the Dutch royal families.

Barnum agreed that the cattle would be used exclusively for his world-famous circus exhibitions. Barnum billed the belted cattle as "a rare and aristocratic breed." So fascinated was he by his acquisition that Barnum continued to raise belted import cattle on his farm in Orange County, New York the rest of his life.

Thanks to Barnum's enthusiasm for these cattle, their progeny were sold and exported to Cuba, Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, Canada, England and the Hawaiian Islands. Due to the cost of importing, only a few ever set foot on U.S. shores again.

During World War II, the unique appearance of the original Dutch herds took a back seat to hunger. Nearly all were butchered during German invasions. Hundreds of years of breeding were lost and only a few pure Dutch Belts survived the war. Only the earlier U.S. importation preserved the purest family of cattle. This military tragedy lost for posterity hundreds of years of selective Dutch genetics.

A few U.S. dairies specialized in Dutch Belted herds. A second tragedy struck the breed when the three major American herds were destroyed in the infamous dairy buyout of the 1980s. By 1985, only a few pure Dutch Belt cattle remained in North America.

North Dakota rancher Russell Bueling and a handful of other adventurous ranchers began experimenting with crossing the Dutch Belted dairy genetics with prominent Angus bloodlines. In the mid 1970s, Russ Danielson, a North Dakota State University animal scientist, began performance testing the results. The additional milk provided by the Dutch blood brought calf-to-cow weaning weights an impressive step forward.

At this point, the BueLingo breed was born. The word "BueLingo" was derived from the Bueling name and he became the first president of the BueLingo Cattle Society (BCS). Today the BCS has over 100 members and has registered over 3,000 animals as breeding stock.

The BueLingo is an open breed, meaning offspring from other breeds can be interbred for specific superior attributes as long as the belt is perpetuated. DCCI utilized the foundation BueLingo bloodlines and selectively blended them with proven superior performance genetics. Prominent bloodlines of Limousin, Angus and Salers were commingled resulting in a huge forward leap.

By allowing outside blood in the BueLingo breed, Darol Dickinson, general manager at DCCI, said and means "we can introduce the greatest performance blood in the world to make sure BueLingo are superior in every quality. We can utilize the very best of any great breed, a tremendous advantage."

At birth, BueLingo calves average under 75 pounds. Adult cows are moderate in size, 1,100 to 1,200 pounds, and the adult sires are 1,900 - 2,100 pounds.

How to figure herd size? Dickinson, never at a loss for quips, advised, "When inventorying BueLingo, either count the white spots or else count the dark sections and divide by two. If the numbers don't come out the same, do a recount."

USDA Water Rule Emphasizes Fairness In Meat Processing

WASHINGTON D.C. — New meat inspection regulations released recently are an important step toward ensuring equity in the differences between meat and poultry processing and giving more information to consumers, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association said.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's final rule on added water bases inspection standards on science and reduces inequities between meat and poultry processing that have existed for more than 40 years, said George Hall, NCBA president and a cattle producer from Mustang, Okla.

"We fought so hard for this because not only was the previous rule unfair to cattle producers, it was also unfair to consumers who were paying inflated prices for poultry due to added water weight," Hall said.

The final regulation follows a standard set by a 1997 federal court verdict. NCBA contributed financial resources to the 1997 lawsuit, Kenney v. Glickman, brought by Iowa producers. A federal judge in that case ruled that the poultry regulations on added water are based on "arbitrary and capricious" standards.

PASA's Farming For The Future Conference Feb. 9-10

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 10th annual Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture (PASA) Farming for the Future Conference is Feb. 9-10 in State College.

Theme of this year's conference is "Food is Our Commonwealth: Beyond Business as Usual."

Keynote speaker Jim Hightower will set the tone of "Beyond Business as Usual." Hightower is the former Texas agriculture commissioner as well as an author, radio commentator, public speaker and political sparkplug. As Texas ag commissioner, he used government to help bring social justice and economic opportunity to all Texans, particularly small farmers.

He is the author of "Hard Times, Hard Tomatoes," "There's Nothing in the Middle of the Road But Yellow Stripes and Dead Armadillos," and most recently "If the Gods Had Meant Us to Vote, They Would Have Given Us Candidates."

Joining Hightower at the PASA conference is Winona LaDuke. LaDuke is an Ojibwe activist from the White Earth Reservation in northern Minnesota. She ran with Ralph Nader as the 2000 Green Party vice-presidential candidate. LaDuke is the founder of the White Earth Land Recovery Project and the author of several books, including 'All Our Relations."

The conference will feature 50 workshops on topics ranging from pastured poultry to composting, seasonal dairy production, to biotech issues, high tunnel production, to cover cropping, farm training of interns and apprentices to organic grain production. It will host speakers including Gary Zimmer, Jo Robinson, George Devault, David Zartman, Jane Mt. Pleasant, Joan Gussow, and Jim and Adele Hayes.

Only One Buyer Bids At Tobacco Auction

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The dismal tobacco selling season continues.

On Tuesday this week, no sale was conducted, since only one buyer was present. That buyer was Mike Bailey from Virginia, according to Dennis Hess, manager of the Pennsylvania Tobacco Marketing Association auction.

The auction had 52,575 pounds on the floor at auction. However, Bailey placed bids on the tobacco on the floor, from a high of $1 per pound, and some down to 75 cents a pound, with outgrades priced at 30-40 cents per pound. Average was 88 cents a pound, Hess noted.

The growers can either accept the bids or reject them.

Hess said an auction is planned tentatively for Thursday, Jan. 25. He said the auction needs buyers and growers. Call Hess at the auction at (717) 786-4389 to set up delivery times.

Associations React To Rejection Of Pork Checkoff

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Late last week, U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman announced that he would prepare and issue a final rule to terminate the Pork Checkoff Program.

The statewide pork producer industry conducted a meeting at the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture building in Harrisburg Thursday evening to determine their strategy in light of the checkoff rejection.

The rejection was the result of a referendum conducted by USDA between Aug. 18 and Sept. 21 last year. Final vote was 14,396 for and 15,951 against the checkoff.

Barb Wiand, Mifflinburg, who operates a 300-sow farrow-to-finish herd and is president of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council (PPPC), noted that the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC) is in "crisis mode" after the announcement.

An injunction by the NPPC was reported to be filed late last week by a group including concerned independent producers, state associations, and NPPC, according to a release from the national council.

"We are deeply disappointed and very concerned by USDA's announcement regarding the pork checkoff referendum," said Craig Jarolimek, NPPC president. "USDA . . . understands the negative impact termination of the pork checkoff will have on every pork producer in this country."

According to Karl Johnson, co-chair of the Vote Yes Task Force, "Again and again producers are citing to us examples of flaws in the referendum voting process."

Wiand and the state industry are still trying to sort out what the injunction will implies. Information still was not available as of presstime.

But if the injunction is unsuccessful, and the checkoff is indeed terminated, Wiand said, "a lot of our promotion and education programs will come to a halt."

The monthly checkoff report for October 2000 showed that in the state, a total of $73,951.96 was raised. A portion of that amount is sent to the NPPC and National Pork Board for the administration of their programs. About $22,000 is shared by PPPC and other Pennsylvania pork promotion efforts.

Somehow, that funding may have to be picked up by independent processors and producers, if promotion, education, and research efforts are to continue.

If the checkoff is canceled, the PPPC would have to look for ways to fund events such as the Keystone Pork Expo, scheduled Feb. 6 at the Lebanon Valley Expo Center, North Cornwall.

About $54 million was collected through the pork checkoff in 2000. As required by the Pork Promotion Research and Consumer Information Act (which became law in 1985), 20 percent of the money is returned to the state pork association for investment in state-directed promotion, consumer education, and research programs.

The checkoff rate stood at 45 cents per $100 value of marketed hogs.

Other industries who are facing similar issues regarding checkoff dollars reacted to the announcement. Many believed there could be strong repercussions to other checkoff-dependent industries because of the referendum announcement.

George Hall, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association, Mustang, Okla., noted Wednesday that the agency charged with the responsibility of counting beef producer petitions did not get the required amount — 10 percent of all beef producers — to sign to institute a referendum.

"NCBA will continue its aggressive work in helping implement programs funded by the beef checkoff," said Hall.

Les McNeill, chairman of the Cattlemen's Beef Board, Panhandle, Texas, noted that regular independent surveys show there is significant support for board efforts. The last survey in summer of 2000 found that 69 percent of producers support or strongly support the beef checkoff.

"We believe the trust beef producers have in us is justified," said McNeill.

Paul Slayton, executive director of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, said that a 10 percent vote would mean 120,000 producers would have had to sign to call for a referendum.

The pork industry, Slayton noted, is vertically integrated, with processors and packers owning much pork. The beef industry, however, is horizontally integrated, with independent producers and processors.

Seven out of 10 producers support the beef program. The checkoff, at $1 per head, is heavily endorsed by producers.

The beef industry "is a lot more stable," Slayton said, compared to the pork industry. The beef industry can't significantly and quickly build inventory.

Out of $1.3 million collected by the state, about $500,000 is returned to Pennsylvania to run various programs. The council employs six full-time and one part-time.

New Video Showcases Dairy Resources

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders has produced a new video called "Make It Work In Pennsylvania" to introduce dairy producers to the many non-traditional management resources now available in Pennsylvania.

Interested persons in Pennsylvania can receive a free copy of this video, which is ideal to show at county dairy days, breed meetings and other dairy educational events or farm-related meetings.

The video overviews resources available in business planning, dairy advisory teams, consulting services, reproduction management, herd health, milk quality, employee training, and specialization like heifer raising and forage production. It's the perfect medium to show any dairy producer how he or she can "make it work" in Pennsylvania.

"In Pennsylvania, we are fortunate to have available the types of progressive services and ideas highlighted in this video," says Dan Mains, producer and Stakeholders' board member. "We not only have the strong traditional Extension programs and industry support, we also have working examples of new and innovative thinking that every dairyman can copy and use."

The video was made possible through a matching grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and contributions from industry sponsors. It is 12 minutes long and features information from 18 different industry professionals and Pennsylvania dairy producers.

To get a copy of "Making It Work In Pennsylvania," send requests to The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, 777 West Harrisburg Pike, Middletown, PA 17057, e-mail to dmr25 psu.edu or fax request to (717) 948-6611. Please include your name, organization and address to receive the video.

Questions regarding this video or other programs of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stateholders should be addressed to Alan Bair at (717) 948-6328.

Growers: Market Crop Before Using High Tunnels

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Organic produce growers can look to developments in high tunnel technology.

The strong point of a high tunnel is that you can "use biological controls pretty effectively in them," said Dr. Bill Lamont, Penn State associate professor of vegetable crops.

Lamont spoke Monday afternoon during a session of the annual New Holland Vegetable Day at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland.

Sponsored by the Eastern Lancaster County School District Young Farmer Program and Penn State, the annual fruit and vegetable day drew about 180 growers and agri-industry representatives.

Lamont provided an overview of Penn State's high tunnel research program, involving research on 24 separate units under way at the High Tunnel Education and Research Center, part of the Penn State Center For Plasticulture.

High tunnels are simple, greenhouse-type structures, nonpermanent, which extend the season early in the spring to late in the fall.

Growers in the southeastern part of the state are the "avant garde," said Lamont, in research in the systems that provide no heat or forced ventilation systems (like conventional greenhouses) and use simple roll-up, single-layer plastic sides.

Four more tunnels will be constructed at the Penn State site this spring, Lamont noted. They include two measuring 17 feet by 96 feet (to look at a typical commercial-size unit), one measuring 21 feet by 36 feet (a wider tunnel), and another 17-foot by 36-foot unit like others at the site.

The buildings are designed to last about 25- 30 years. The 6-mil plastic lasts about four years.

There are high tunnels in various locations in the state, including Erie, Lancaster, Blair, Indiana, Potter, Lackawanna, and Elk counties.

The tunnels use drip irrigation. The specially modified units at Penn State allow equipment to enter at the ends of the tunnels.

Lamont noted that you can grow anything in a high tunnel. "But can you market it?" he said. "Marketing, marketing, marketing is the whole idea."

Lamont said it is important to have plants marketed before plans are made to grow them.

For those who have established high tunnels, Lamont pointed out the importance of exhausting the humidity that can build up overnight. The sides should be rolled up early in the morning.

Lamont spoke about many crops that can be grown in a high tunnel. One is early season lettuce, with a lot more options during the season that exist in the southeast part of the state.

Tomatoes have proven successful in many tests at Penn State. They provide good yields and "nice-looking" tomatoes, he said.

One challenge is controlling powdery mildew. That's why it is critical to exhaust the humidity buildup as soon as possible the following morning.

The high tunnels allow growers to harvest crops even in heavy rains. And birds don't get to the crops.

A typical 17-foot by 96-foot high tunnel costs Penn State $3,738 for materials. Labor was an additional $1,440 in State College.

The houses were tested to sustain 63 mile-per-hour winds.

Break-even prices at those costs are 87 cents a pound for pepper, 36 cents a pound for tomatoes, 58 cents a pound for cucumbers, and $1.16 a pound for potatoes.

The tunnels, which require daily monitoring and maintenance, can allow growers to "capture more of the consumer's dollar," Lamont said. "That's the name of the game."

More information on the high tunnel systems at Penn State is available on the Website, http://hortweb.cas.psu.edu/ plastic/ Lamont has detail on how to construct the high tunnel available at (814) 865-7118.

According to Alan MacNab, Penn State, 1994 was a horrible year for late blight, costing Pennsylvania growers at least $9 million in losses and creating farm bankruptcies in New York.

In Lancaster County, there were 43 days suitable for the development of late blight, MacNab said, compared to only nine in 1997, 21 in 1998, and zero in 1999.

MacNab called 2000 a "late blight year."

But because of forecasting tools, growers could stem the damages that could have made it even worse last growing season.

If growers don't have a fungicide spray program, late blight "can wipe you out," MacNab said.

The difference between early and late blight is marked. According to the Penn State specialist, late blight is characterized by large blotches that expand rapidly, even on new green growth. And fruit can be devastated rapidly.

Early blight is characterized by older, bottom leaves and can have a less dramatic impact on fruit set, size, and condition.

Late blight is an "extremely devastating disease that can wipe out a field very fast," he said.

MacNab also pointed to other disease threats in the fields, including mosaic virus. The watermelon virus type 2 was the most common and important.

Growers should monitor leaves on the plant, follow BLITECAST and other crop forecast services, and use care and promptness in their spray programs.

Bill Troxell, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, said that the Pennsylvania Vegetable Marketing and Research Program was successful in generating seven press releases, creating 82 articles read by 1.1 million people.

He overviewed the work of the program to market produce through the Pennsylvania Produce: Simply Delicious logo sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The marketing program included billboards in 30 locations.

At the Farm Show booth last year, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association (PVGA) volunteers took in enough funds at the Food Court booth to provide $31,400 for research programs. About 150 growers volunteered their time.

At this year's convention in Hershey, the PVGA plans to broaden the scope of the program to include two additional sessions for potato growers.

A preview of the show will be published in Lancaster Farming's Grower & Marketer section Jan. 27.

For those who operate greenhouses, providing adequate supplies of food and water, in the right amounts at the right times to the right plants, is key.

According to Alan Michael, Penn State horticulturalist, critical elements are pH of the media and the water and the fertilizer used. Growers should make use of a pocket-pen like pH meter. Test the water and know the form and amounts of fertilizer to use. "Get that media tested," said Michael. "Know where you're starting from."

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Eighty-four youth participated in a one-day lamb and sheep skillathon at the Pennsylvania Farm Show in Harrisburg.

Penn State Animal Science instructor Dr. Keith Bryan conducts the skillathon. To participate, youth moved through five stations that were designed to test their knowledge about the lamb and sheep industry.

The quality assurance station tested knowledge about producing quality meats including how to read medicine labels. In the feeds station, participants needed to identify various types of feeds and additives. Participants at the meats station matched the various cuts of meats with the part of the lamb. The equipment station tested identification and tool usage skills. The management quiz tested for general information about the sheep industry.

Following is a list of show placings.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

2001-2002 Budget Will Seek More Than $2 Million To Promote Agricultural Products

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Speaking to an international agriculture group in conjunction with Pennsylvania's annual Farm Show, Gov. Tom Ridge announced he will seek more than $2 million in his 2001-2002 state budget to promote Pennsylvania agricultural products around the globe.

"We make stuff in Pennsylvania — and we make it well," Ridge told international and domestic agriculture leaders at the Agro 2001 International Celebration Dinner in Harrisburg, in conjunction with the 85th Pennsylvania Farm Show.

"Put simply, we believe our products are the best in the world. And that's especially true of our agricultural products. That's why I will propose more than $2 million in my new state budget to promote our agricultural products at home and abroad."

Gov. Ridge's budget proposal would provide more than $1.2 million for export promotion and education to enable Pennsylvania to further expand its agricultural international trade. If approved by the General Assembly, it will be a five percent increase over this year's funding.

Ridge also proposed an additional $950,000 for matching grant funds to enable additional dollar-for-dollar grants to Pennsylvania commodity organizations to market their products in Pennsylvania, across the country and around the globe — a 5.5 percent increase.

Combined, Ridge's investments in these two key agricultural export programs have increased from under $500,000 to more than $2 million during his administration.

Ridge thanked Sen. Michael Waugh (R-York), chairman of the Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, and Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. (R-Montgomery), chairman of the House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, for their support of budget initiatives to promote agricultural exports.

Ridge said the increased funding reinforces his administration's commitment to Pennsylvania agriculture — the state's Number 1 industry, which employs more than 800,000 people and contributed more than $44 billion each year to the commonwealth's economy.

The International Dinner is part of the Agro 2001 International Celebration hosted by the Ridge Administration every year, just before the opening of the annual Farm Show, to showcase Pennsylvania's commitment to international exports and international trade development.

Earlier today, the state agriculture department hosted an agribusiness trade show to showcase more than 100 export-ready Pennsylvania companies that offer export products and services. Many of the International guests of Agro 2001 attended the 85th Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Farm And Home Foundation Increases Scholarships

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — More money to fund scholarships for students pursuing agricultural and consumer science studies is up for grabs.

Long noted for its dedication to keep the county in the forefront of agriculture, the Farm and Home Foundation has consistently provided scholarships to college freshman. Now the Foundation offers a substantial increase in scholarship monies. At the Foundation's annual meeting on Tuesday evening, Dr. John Schwartz said that the board approved the annual awarding of eight four-year scholarships of $1,600 per year.

Since the 1960's, the Foundation has awarded 390 scholarships valued at $318,300. These were one-time scholarships given to college freshman. With the change, recipients will be able to renew the scholarships each year for four years, if they maintain at least a 3.0 grade point average and continue in the required field of study.

Applications are available at local high schools.

The Farm and Home Foundation forms the backbone for Lancaster County agriculture and extension programs. To keep things running smoothly and to ensure that Lancaster County continues to be in the forefront of farm production, the Foundation continues to update the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, and renew services.

Board members and directors are elected to oversee the Farm and Home Centerk, which serves as the hub for extension, 4-H, and many other agricultural and family strength groups. In addition, the use of the building is rented by social, civic, garden, and commercial organizations. The Foundation makes decisions in regards to the maintenance of the building.

Treasurer Paul Wolgemuth Jr. reported net assets of $759,830.

Luke Brubaker, president of the organization, said that the smooth workings of the foundation are the result of many people working together. He commended the significant contributions of J. Leroy Esbenshade, who oversees the building and maintenance committee; Shirley Wagner, who oversees the master gardeners flower and landscaping efforts; Raymond Brubaker, custodian for 30 years; and two couples who assist in keeping the building clean, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Nissley and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Witmer.

Directors elected or re-elected at the meeting include Luke Brubaker, who also serves as president; Ruth Bushong, J. Leroy Esbenshade, Guy Eshelman, Joyce Graybill, Warren Miller, and Bonnie Ranck. They join Larry R. Weaver, vice president; Linda Esbenshade, secretary, and Paul Wolgemuth Jr., treaurer.

Northampton 4-H Takes First In Potato Judging

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Both the A and B teams of Northampton County 4-H took first place in potato grading at the 85th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

Joe Hiensicker of Northampton County won the individual high honors award.

In the A team competition, Adams County took second place and Lehigh County took third. In the B team division, Lehigh County took second. Ironically, both scores for the B teams from Northampton and Lehigh counties were higher than the counties' A team.

Individually, Travis Hahn and Chrissy Van Shoick of Northampton County won second and third place respectively.

The competition consists of three parts — uniform market quality, grading, and naming potato defects.

Supreme Champion Junior Market Lamb Chosen

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) – One hundred and eighty-eight market lambs in various classes and breeds entered the Farm Show's small arena on Tuesday to be judged for Supreme and Reserve Supreme Champion of the Junior Market Lamb Show.

Supreme Champion over all breeds went to Gabe Svonavec of Svonavec Club Lambs, Somerset, and his 127-pound crossbred lamb.

Alex Langhans of Langhans Livestock Farm, Elizabethville, Dauphin County, took Reserve Supreme Champion honors with his 109-pound crossbred lamb. Alex participated in the Farm Show two previous years, placing 6th and 3rd in his classes.

Bob Kimm of Iowa judged the competition. Kimm retired in September from Hawkeye Community College where he taught for 32 years. He now runs a flock of 150 Suffolk ewes and conducts an adult lamb and wool program.

The supreme champion market lamb was exhibited by Gabe Svonavec shown here with Sec. Sam Hayes.

District Welcomes Conservationist

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — The Chester County Conservation District welcomes Scott A. Lackey as their nutrient management resource conservationist.

His duties will entail providing county farmers with educational and technical assistance to help develop and implement nutrient management plans. Nutrient management plans promote conscientious and commonsense use of best management practices.

Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act (Act 6) was passed in 1993 and came into effect in October 1997. The act states that all concentrated animal operations (CAOs) must have a nutrient management plan developed for their land. A CAO is defined as any operation that has more than two animal units (AU), which is equal to 2,000 pounds of live animal weight per acre. The program is designed to benefit both farmers of Pennsylvania and water quality throughout the state.

During the summer of 2000, Scott interned with the conservation district. He earned his degree in environmental planning from Indiana University of Pennsylvania. He is a native of Mercer County, where he grew up on his family's 275-acre dairy farm.

Why Should Penn State Have a Beef Herd?

John Comerford, Extension Beef Specialist and Keith Bryan, Instructor
Penn State

The mission for any land-grant college or university is to conduct research, teach graduate and undergraduate students, and provide service to the public through cooperative extension programs The application of beef cattle, both purebred and commercial herds, to these three educational missions is an important tool for success.

The Penn State beef herd in the Department of Dairy and Animal Science currently consists of 75 commercial, crossbred cows and 55 registered Angus cows. We anticipate an increase in those numbers in order to meet the growing needs of our expanding programs in beef production.

Teaching

Beef cattle are used in at least six different undergraduate courses in the Department of Dairy and Animal Science that range from introductory animal science courses to instruction in artificial insemination techniques They are of particular importance in senior-level production courses that focus on beef cattle management methods

Our students do castrations, apply ear tags, give vaccinations, implant cattle, and do breeding plans based on our herd records. Other major uses are in the judging and live animal evaluation courses. For the latter courses, a significant pool of animals is needed to give students the opportunity to evaluate the variation inherent in a breed. There is no simulation or substitute for using the "real thing" when teaching these courses.

In addition to competitions among universities in livestock judging, these courses are important to teach students critical evaluation, decision-making, and defense of their decisions. These are important life skills for whatever career they choose. We are also planning a student-managed production sale for the Angus herd to provide some valuable training in marketing purebred beef cattle.

One of our undergraduate student clubs, Block and Bridle, makes extensive use of beef cattle for students to train and prepare the cattle for showmanship and fitting contests at the Little International program each spring. We are rapidly becoming one of the few major universities in the Northeast region that allows students to have direct contact with beef cattle as part of their educational experience. As Penn State continues to be a leader in educational opportunities in the animal sciences in this region, we feel it is very important to have cattle available to fulfill that need. The success of our beef-breeding program is an important recruitment tool to attract the best and brightest students from around the US to our undergraduate major, Animal Sciences.

Research

Nearly all faculty in the Department of Dairy and Animal Science are charged with conducting research and publishing the results in scientific journals. Research is a difficult and expensive task. One reason for this difficulty is the need to replicate experimental treatments. In some cases this may just mean another rack of test tubes, but with applied research in beef production, a large number of animals is needed. For example, if we wish to compare two types of feed ingredients in a feedlot test, this implies there should be 60 animals of similar age, breeding, and sex to provide statistical power to the experiment This result indicates we need to purchase 60 animals or produce calves from 120 cows (since half of the calves will be of the same sex)

Purchasing cattle has some inherent problems for good research. there is little ability to control variables such as genetics and health, and a segregated facility is needed to maintain animal health and biosecurity for the rest of the herd. Another issue is apparent with studies that include feedlot cattle. When the studies are over, the cattle are all harvested. A consistent supply of new animals requires a production herd. We are often asked why research is not done with private, cooperator herds In some rare cases this can work, but it seldom produces publishable results because the investigators cannot maintain the control that is needed.

For example, when animals are placed on a research protocol, there can be no variance from that protocol for any reason Because we seldom have enough cattle produced in our herds for all of the research that is being done, faculty members doing research with beef cattle share the cattle that are available This results in most projects being conducted over multiple years to achieve publishable results However, there is a need to continue applied research with cattle to determine the economic and biological value of available production technologies.

Extension

The Penn State beef herds effectively demonstrate much of the current and pending technology available to beef producers. Field days and visitors to the herds are important ways to transmit new information The statewide 4-H and FFA livestock and meats judging events held each summer make use of beef cattle for these contests The ability to demonstrate new technology in beef production is necessary to keep producers aware of the changes and improvements being made in the industry

Effective education and research in beef production makes it imperative that there are cattle available to meet these needs Penn State's beef herds, both purebred and commercial herds, are an invaluable resource to meet these needs

USDA Announces Results Of Validation Of Beef Petitions

WASHINGTON DC — The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Marketing Service announced Wednesday that not enough valid petitions were received to require a referendum on the beef checkoff.

"Pricewaterhouse Coopers (PwC), the nationally respected accounting firm, has carefully reviewed the petitions and determined that the number of valid petitions submitted to USDA is insufficient to trigger a referendum," said AMS Administrator Kathleen A. Merrigan.

The Beef Promotion and Research Act provides for a referendum if requested by 10 percent of all cattle producers in the United States.

USDA determined this number to be 107,883 producers. PwC conducted a 100 percent hand-count of the actual petitions and determined that the Livestock Marketing Association submitted 127,927 petitions to USDA. PwC estimates that no more than 83,464 petitions were valid (65.2 percent, 2.7 percent). This is significantly less than the 107,883 petitions (84.3 percent) necessary to call for a referendum.

A copy of the draft PwC report will be available later today on the AMS Web site at: http://www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/mpb/rp-beef.htm. Because the methodology employed seeks to identify invalid petitions, any additional returns can only further reduce the number of valid petitions.

"Although the number of petitions submitted to USDA is not sufficient to trigger a referendum, thousands of beef producers have clearly signaled their concern over the beef checkoff program," Merrigan noted. A USDA task force on research and promotion programs has recommended that all checkoff programs be the subject of continuance referenda every five years to ensure that the programs have industry support.

"This petition drive should serve as a reminder to all national checkoffs of their responsibility to stay in close touch with the producers who fund these programs, and that the activities they undertake be fully reflective of the marketing needs of all those in the industry," she added.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

looks positive for the period August =96 October 2000. It shows butter consumption up 7.4 percent, American cheese up 1.1 percent, other cheese (mainly mozzarella) up 5.1percent, nonfat dry milk down 3.0 percent, and fluid milk up 0.2 percent.

The problem is the U.S. economy is showing signs of slowing down. Real gross domestic product, a measure of goods and services produced in the U.S. economy, fell from an annual growth rate of 5 6 percent in the second quarter (April =96June) of 2000 to 2 2 percent in the third quarter (July-September) of 2000. The concern is that these growth rates could languish at 1-2 percent next year, or even dip into negative territory.

The reason for the slowdown in the U.S. economy is due to a number of factors. Gasoline, home heating oil, and natural gas are more expensive this winter than in past years. That leaves less money in peoples pockets. And, the stock market has shown signs of weakness due to worries about tech stocks and lower quarterly profits. People now feel their stocks are devalued and are therefore less likely to make big purchases (i.e. cars and homes) Christmas retail sales were reported to be terrible this year That creates a ripple effect throughout the economy

The point is, a slower U.S. economy means less business for food service. That will negatively impact demand for cheese, butter, ice cream, etc. The good news, however, is that federal policymakers are listening. The Federal Reserve Board lowered interest rates recently, and the health of the economy is in full public debate. Positive action now can create a "soft landing" for the economy and will prevent a economic recession in 2001 or 2002.

The dairy industry, however, needs to do its part to ward off a dairy recession." Some would say we are already in the middle of one. What can be done? First, lower cow numbers. Cow numbers in 20 select states have grown too much in 2000 and that is the reason cheese prices have stalled this year. A reduction of just one percent in cow numbers could dramatically change the perception of surplus milk in the market place.

That would mean less production of cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk, and would allow stocks to be further reduced. This would help firm commodity prices, primarily cheese.

Cheese prices this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange showed further weakness. Barrel cheese prices remained at $1.0650 per pound. However, block prices weakened from $1.0750 per pound on Monday, January 8 to $1.0675 by Friday, January 12 These are below the government cheese purchase prices under the dairy price support program According to USDA, despite lower production levels, cheese demand is only fair at best.

During the week of January 8-12, the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) purchased 128,324 pounds of barrel cheese and 158,400 pounds of process cheese from the Midwest. The CCC received cancellations of 142,554 pounds of previously offered Midwest blocks. USDA also announced that the Kansas City Commodity Office on January 5th announced an offer to purchased between 3.7 million and 9.4 million pounds of mozzarella cheese for shipment between February and June 2001. This will have a positive effect on the cheese market.

Butter prices increased sharply this week at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. Grade AA butter prices jumped from $1.1725 per pound on Monday to $1.30 by Wednesday, only to fall back to $1.2375 by Friday Butter prices are very important in determining Class I, II and IV prices under federal orders. Butter stocks are at very low levels following strong demand during the holiday season Look for more fluctuations in butter prices between now and spring

FSA Announces Results Of County Committee Election

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Results of this year's election for a vacant seat on the Lebanon County Farm Service Agency committee were announced Jan. 3 by Jennifer Hershey, county executive director of the Lebanon County FSA.

Frank Reist of Lebanon received the most votes in the election and will assume his committee duties on Jan. 1, Jennifer Hershey said. Reist will serve a three-year term.

George Ungemach and Jody Parker finished second and third, respectively, in the election, which was conducted Nov. 24-Dec. 4. Also receiving votes were Shirley Krall and Carl Weidler.

County office employees tabulated election results Dec. 11. Vote totals will be released after the Pennsylvania FSA Office has certified them.

"Since he received the second highest number of votes," Hershey said, "George Ungemach, Palmyra, will serve as the first alternate to the county committee for a one-year term." Jody Parker, Lebanon, will serve as a second alternate for a one-year term.

Alternates serve in the absence of regular committee members and fill vacancies on the committee when they occur. County FSA committee elections are conducted annually, according to Hershey. Candidates are nominated by local farmers and ranchers, and must live in the county or local administrative area they will represent and must be eligible to vote in the county election.

Duties of county committee members include informing farmers of the purpose and provisions of FSA programs, keeping the state FSA committee informed of local administrative area conditions, recommending needed changes in farm programs, participating in county meetings as necessary, and performing other duties as assigned by the state FSA committee.

Reist will join Jeff Werner and Barbara Grumbine on the committee.

Before The Internet, There Was The Stockyard

ary 1951 article for the "Mennonite Community" magazine that "early Pennsylvania records place cattle and hogs as important in the Lancaster area almost as early as 1710."

Landis wrote about his first recollections of the stockyards. As a boy, he would help drive the cattle to nearby Oregon or Landis Valley to be weighed and then driven to the yards.

"The dealers generally drove the countryside and bought the animals on the farms, sometimes at so much per hundredweight or on the hoof. Sometimes the dealer made money, sometimes he lost money, and over the years seldom accumulated much," wrote Landis.

"Going down the one alley of the yards you soon see John M. Hoober, genial and smiling, interested in knowing whether you might want to buy sleek beef on the hoof for the high dollar, or whether you might be 'just looking.' He is the president of Lancaster Livestock Exchange."

"This place goes back to 1895. Prior to that the stockyards were on Prince Street up to the early 40's. Everything was sold private-treaty," said Bill McCoy, McCoy Cattle Company. "Through the 60's and 70's there were still a lot of cattle sold privately."

The McCoy name is a familiar one at the stockyard. Several members of the family have consigned and sold cattle under the Merton W. McCoy name, founded in 1937, the William W. McCoy name, founded in 1932, and McCoy Cattle Co.

Originally owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad, exchange members, a policy-making body, bought the operation from the railroad. The stockyards, according to McCoy, are actually referred to as "terminals." Other terminals included Chicago, Omaha, St. Paul, and Sioux City.

Private Treaty, Auction Sales

"There weren't any sale barns. All livestock came to terminals at that time," said McCoy. "The livestock were primarily moved by rail and once at the terminal were consigned to a brokerage firm listed to do business."

The firms filed with the Packers and Stockyards company to be licensed to do business at that particular market, explained McCoy, who likened the system to buying and selling stock at the New York Stock Exchange.

In the marketing system at the terminal, "people just walked up and down the alleys and bought cattle on a private-treaty basis," said McCoy.

While Mondays remained the day to buy cattle private-treaty, Wednesdays did become a day for the auction with the audition of a sale barn in 1964. The auction, however, was not without opposition.

"It was a big item because a lot of commissioner firm personnel were opposed to it. The private treaty system allowed you to play personalities. Everyone had a certain reputation, and that would tell a little bit more about the cattle."

In the face of the opposition, the stockyards "went to the auction to solidify slipping receipts. About that time we started to see a few cattle going direct, and the competition was getting stronger. It was a kind of philosophical change, but it offered the best of both worlds, really."

Another reason for the addition of an auction was a decrease in numbers of packer-buyers because of government regulations, said McCoy.

"On Monday this was a hubbub of activity because of packer buyers. We lost the little butchers because the regulations made them revamp the kill floors or just buy quarters or halves. It served their purposes but took a lot of buying power off the marketplace. That really hurt."

Also, in the private treaty arrangement, a farmer would watch the commissioner and buyers looking at the cattle. However in the auction ring buying and selling was out in the open, which led to the auction becoming the more popular way to consign animals.

The stockyards were ideally situated as the biggest buying interests in the East.

"We enjoyed the kosher market for well-fed, heavy-carcassed animals," he said. Animals sold in Lancaster went to Boston, New York, Baltimore, and Washington.

Rail Transport

A big blackboard listed the receipts every Monday from other terminals. "Knowing what the beef trade was told us what we could get for cattle.

"These old terminals, like Lancaster, were price-setters for the eastern seaboard. Cattle came here from all over."

In the earlier days of the stockyard, the West was a primary supplier of cattle, with animals coming from Nebraska, Montana, and the Daktokas in the summer. Texas and Oklahoma supplied the cattle, transported by rail, in the winter.

In the '30s and '40s consignors rode in the caboose along with the cattle to ensure the railroad was taking care of the animals. Ranches sent along cowboys to accompany the cattle on the trip.

If the animals were transported from the colder regions in the cooler months, newspaper was put over the slats of the railroad car to keep the cattle warmer.

"They had to be offloaded, fed, and watered every 36 hours," said McCoy. Trucks, however, made better time and were able to bring cattle in from Montana in 40 hours, signaling another shift in the way the stockyards operated as they moved from rail to truck transport.

Commission Firms, Employees, and the Inn

Major buying interests, small-business butchers, and a "whole host" of buyers converged on the stockyards to purchase livestock, said McCoy.

"Every commission firm had a little office around the yards. All the trading was done at these markets. Everybody came; this is where the action was. It made this a really fun place."

There were, in fact, 14 offices located on the stockyards, each with their own area and holding pens to show cattle to customers, each office vying to get the best prices for their customers.

McCoy compares the setup to "a central market where everybody displayed their cattle. Buyers walked up and down the alleys. If they saw something they liked, they bartered with the broker or commissioning firm and negotiated a price."

Three shifts of employees kept the animals fed and watered, the alleys and pens cleaned, and the fences whitewashed.

The Stock Yard Inn was the central meeting place for the Union Stockyards. The converted residence was known for its fine food, according to Isaac M. Groff's "History of the Lancaster Stockyards."

"The Stock Yard Hotel was an institution of the stockyards and seldom did outsiders venture inside its domain... the barroom was outfitted with desks against the other wall. Here traders did their 'paper work,' recording their day's transactions in ledger books before office space was available on the yards." Today the Stock Yard Inn still enjoys a reputation of serving fine food.

Paying Cash

Sam Edwards, Lampeter, grew up in Lancaster city and began working at the stockyards along with his father. At 10 years old, Edwards earned $.25 a day.

Edwards worked weekends as a teenager, unloading 75-80 railroad cars. The cars of cattle, hogs, and sheep to feed, water, and put back on the train to go to Philadelphia.

During World War II, when black marketeers frequented the stockyards, cash was the medium for accomplishing a sale.

McCoy and Edwards remember how one stockyard employee, who had the cash paid for the cattle wrapped in newspaper, put the bundle in the trash can overnight. The next morning, however, another employee took the "trash" out to be burned. Fortunately the mistake was discovered before the day's receipts went up in smoke.

As a teenager Edwards was responsible for taking the cash to the bank every day, a "briefcase bulging with cash," he said. "A lot of the small butchers paid cash. The country butchers would come in with bulging pockets of cash during the black market time."

Also at this time cattle dealers found ways around leaving a record of their sale. Edwards recalls weighing cattle individually on Saturday mornings for a dealer, and attaching a different seller's name to each animal. "He would go to cemeteries to get names," he said.

Slaughterhouses also paid cash to the producers. According to Edwards, slaughterhouses would send cash for the cattle home with the truck drivers. His father would keep the cash overnight in the family's oven for safekeeping.

Moving cattle from pen to pen or to and from the scales required lots of walking, said Edwards. Using horses to all day to move the cattle was the transport of choice for several stockyard employees.

Once the cattle were weighed, the ticket went back to the seller to get the price marked on it. The seller, buyer, and scale-house would all get a copy of the ticket.

During World War II, explained McCoy, the market worked under a ceiling of $18.60, "plus any cash you could get under the table."

A policeman helped to direct traffic when trucks delivering livestock stacked up on the roads into the stockyards, said McCoy.

In The Heyday

Traffic was especially backlogged around Easter, according to Edwards, with the delivery of lambs.

Edwards also recalls alleys filled with 4-H projects which were judged and sold at the stockyards. Between 200-300 cattle came to Lancaster to compete, representing seven or eight counties.

The open-air pens, although conducive to trading, eventually gave way to graded sales and tele-auctions during the evolution of marketing.

"We're adaptive to change, whereas fixed facilities are not and it's costly," he said. McCoy foresees almost all livestock being sold direct, especially with the expanded use of the Internet as a livestock selling tool on the horizon.

As for the future of the stockyards, an agreement is signed awarded first through 10th places and were given special engraved gavels.

In addition to the gavels, the reserve and grand champions were presented plaques, and the grand champion was provided with a $200 prize.

The judging for the contest was based on the following categories: speech and bid calling ability; salesmanship; microphone ability; and appearance. The judges for the event were Bracky Rogers, the National Auctioneers Association President; Mark Ferry; Jim Clayton; Dan Trace; Bob Vanetta; Larry Lafever; Dave Connelly; and Ken Brown. Brent Souder, representing Alderfer Auction Company, chaired the competition.

The finalists, in order of their placing were as follows: grand champion Randy Benton of Greensburg, Westmoreland County; Tim Rocco of Erie, Erie County, reserve champion; Russel Wolf, Jr., of Lebanon, Lebanon County, third place; Eric Lafever of Quarryville, Lancaster County, fourth place; Larry Neuhauser of Lancaster, Lancaster County, fifth place; Matt Hurley of Waynesboro, Franklin County, sixth place; Michael Martin of New Holland, Lancaster County, seventh place; Ray Knecht of Bloomsburg, Columbia County, eighth place; Patrick Burke of Meshoppen, Wyoming County, ninth place; and Jim Young of Dewart, Northumberland County, 10th place.

The grand champion, Randy Benton, was graduated from the Pennsylvania School of Auctioneering in Shiremanstown in 1980. He became interested in auctioneering at the age of eight after attending auctions as a child. After the competition, Benton stated the title was "overwhelming," but he was pleased to receive the honor. He shares the award with his family, his wife Rebecca, and his children Caleb, 12, and Hannah, 10.

Throughout the competition, special auctions, which benefited the Farm Show Scholarship Fund and St. Jude's Hospital, were conducted. Among the items auctioned off during these auctions was the first Farm Show patch and pin in the series and the first-place winner of the Christmas tree ornament contest.

Niehoff Joins Farmers Union Legislative Team

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union (NFU) has announced that Jodi Niehoff has joined the legislative affairs team in the NFU Washington, D.C. office.

Niehoff will be responsible for promoting NFU's policies to members of Congress and the administration.

"Jodi's return to our staff will enable NFU to augment our legislative policy initiatives," said Vice President of Government Relations Tom Buis. "Her experience with agriculture issues on Capitol Hill and the international arena will be especially valuable to our organization as the new Congress and administration address the challenges facing America's farmers and ranchers."

Nichoff previously worked for Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn. From there, she joined NFU to organize the Rally for Rural America that was held on the capital mall in Washington, D.C. in March 2000.

Following an immensely successful rally, Niehoff departed for Berlin, Germany, where she had received fellowship from the Social Democratic Party to work at the Bundestag (Germany's legislature). She acted as an assistant to Rep. Mattias Weisheit, chairman of the agriculture committee for the party.

"I am very pleased to be back," said Niehoff. "I am excited to join NFU's legislative team and I look forward to contributing to the important work they do on behalf of family farmers and ranchers and rural communities."

Nichoff is from Melrose, Minn., where she was born and raised on a dairy farm. She graduated magna cum laude from the University of St. Thomas, St. Paul, Minn., with degrees in political science and German.

for the sale of the stockyards that is contingent on the city rezoning to permit retail sales. The highly-trafficked site, located in the enterprise zone of the city, is now zoned industrial.

McCoy came into the business after college when he began helping his father. Although the career was unplanned, "Forty years later, I'm still in the business," said McCoy, president of the Lancaster Livestock Exchange.

"I don't have any regrets for coming in and staying in this industry. Buyers and sellers traded with shake of their hand, that was the deal; there was implicit trust. That's refreshing."

Next issue: John M. Hoober, Lancaster, and Melvin Horn, Willow Street, share their memories doing business at the stockyards. Both men bought and sold cattle for many years under the J.M. Hoober, Inc. name, founded in 1895.

Milk Marketing Board To Pool Over-Order Premium

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — At the Milk Marketing Board's December meeting, Chairwoman Beverly R. Minor announced that the board would draft regulations to partially pool the over-order premium on Class I (beverage) milk. This decision is the result of many meetings with representatives of the various segments of the dairy industry.

Presently, the Class I over-order premium is paid only to Pennsylvania dairy farmers whose milk is produced, processed as beverage milk, and sold in Pennsylvania. The proposed regulations requiring partial pooling will expand the distribution of this premium to include more Pennsylvania dairy farmers whose milk is processed at a Pennsylvania plant for other types of dairy products such as cheese, ice cream, butter, powdered milk, and cottage cheese.

Chairwoman Minor stated, "In arriving at the direction we are taking today, we have considered many factors. The board recognizes that all dairy farmers experience hardships such as weather conditions and 20-year low prices — regardless of how their milk is utilized. The board recognizes the value of each segment of the industry and what they contribute to making Pennsylvania such a strong dairy state. In dealing with these entities, our main goal is to insure a sufficient quantity of pure, wholesome milk to the inhabitants of Pennsylvania. Therefore, any action we take is with this primary goal in mind.'

Minor presented a challenge to the diverse representatives of the industry to get together to establish the percentage of the premium to be pooled and, in addition, work out the details of the distribution methodology to be proposed in the regulations submitted to the Independent Regulatory Review Commission (IRRC). She also pointed out that drafting these regulations through IRRC could be a lengthy process — as long as one year.

In conclusion, the chairwoman thanked everyone for their patience and assured all present that the board would continue to do whatever necessary to keep the Pennsylvania dairy industry healthy and viable.

Poll Results Show Strong Support For Farmland Preservation

YORK (York Co.) — The Farm and Natural Lands Trust of York County released the results of a public opinion poll on farmland preservation during a press conference recently.

The poll was conducted to determine York County residents' support of additional funding, including a bond issue, for farmland and open space preservation.

As a result of the poll, the Farm and Natural Lands Trust is recommending additional county funds be set aside for farmland and open space preservation. At current funding levels, the county preserves about 3,000 acres per year. At the same time the county is losing 5,000 acres to development per year. The poll indicates York County residents are ready to make a greater commitment to farmland and open space preservation.

According to the poll, support for the concept of funding farm and open space preservation begins at 86 percent. Voters were asked if they would support additional funding for farmland and open space preservation by the issuance of bonds by the county. The poll indicates that 73 percent of those polled would support a bond issue of $20 million, costing the average taxpayer $20 per year. When voters were asked if they would support a $30 million bond issue, 57 percent responded that would support such a bond issue.

York County residents are concerned about the rate of York County's growth. Fifty-four percent say their community is growing too fast and steps should be taken to slow growth. Thirty-two percent indicated that sprawl is their leading concern.

The poll was conducted with 400 registered voters in December 2000. The margin of error for this survey is +/– 4.9 percent, with a 95 percent confidence level.

The Farm and Natural Lands Trust plans to work with the county commissioners, the York County Agricultural Preserve Board, and other interested groups to pursue additional funding for farmland and open space preservation. The trust's goal is to have a funding plan in place by 2002 that addresses at a minimum a backlog of farms that have applied to the county program that could be preserved at a cost of $32 million.

Commodity Representatives Separate Facts From Fiction

Goats Leave Lasting Impression

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

IRWIN (Westmoreland Co.) — "Goats have made an everlasting impact on my life," said 17-year-old Mandie Zieglar, who reigns as both state and national youth representative for the American Dairy Goat Association.

In competition for the commodity title, Mandie used each letter of the word "everlasting" to spell out the influence goats have had on her since the age of five. She clinched the title by ending with a self-created poem. The stanzas reflected the comic relief for which mischievous goats are noted.

"Goats are great as everyone knows, but if you're not careful, they'll step on your toes. They know when it's dinner and it's time to be fed. What can I say, 'They're like bulls seeing red...' From a kid to a doe, to a smelly old buck, when off to a show, I wish you all lots of luck."

But goats provide much more than entertainment, Mandie is quick to point out. In classroom presentations, Mandie tells students about the benefits goat milk provides, the meat that many nationalities depend upon, and the animal's characteristics needed to win a show. Mandie began a program called Kids for Kids, in which she takes goats into elementary schools to teach the students about goats.

Mandie said that her parents, Eugene and Bobbi Zieglar, had been looking for animals that could be raised on their five-acre property in Irwin, Westmoreland. When Mandie was four years old, she was fascinated with the goats her cousins were raising. So the Zieglars purchased some Nubian dairy goats. They have 13 head, seven of which are milked in season.

"I prefer Nubians because of their sweet personality, long floppy ears, and they come in a variety of colors," Mandie said.

Mandie has always milked the Nubians by hand, but she is in the process of assembling a milk machine to use for spring freshening.

"It takes about 1½ hours to do all the barn work each day. I expect a milking machine will save me ½ hour each day," Mandie said.

The milk is pasteurized and fed to the baby goats.

"We also make goat fudge. We use an old recipe that is a family favorite, so we don't share it," Mandie said.

Since she was five years old, Mandie has been showing goats at her local fair. At her first show, she is reported to have captured the judge's and audience's attention as she clung to her goat's halter while parading around the show ring. As she passed by her parents, she called out, "Oh ...my aching back." The audience guffawed at a comment typically heard from the older generation and not from a five-year-old.

As the youth representative for the goat association, Mandie wears the traditional tiara and banner. She hands out ribbons at local, state, and national goat shows, and presents classroom

State Rabbit Queen Chelsea Pajak and her sister Julia, who is State Rabbit Princess, said that 45 different breeds of rabbits and numerous varieties of each breed require constant learning.

Rabbits Inject Calming Therapy In Pressure-Packed Society

WASHINGTON (Washington Co.) — Some people see rabbits only as soft, furry pets, but sisters Chelsea and Julia Pajak said that their duties as rabbit queen and princess respectively require in-depth knowledge that would surprise most people.

"You could spend your life studying rabbits, and you still wouldn't know everything," Julia said. "There are 45 different breeds and each breed has many varieties. For example, the Netherlands Dwarf has 32 varieties — and that's one of the fewest varieties."

The sisters are accomplished veterans of spouting off facts for identifying rabbit breeds. Their knowledge is a requirement to hold titles of royalty.

Chelsea, 17, said that in addition to filling out an application, she needed to take a written test worth 100 points to determine her knowledge, judge three classes of rabbits, present a promotional speech for the industry, and interview with judges.

The daughters of Fred and Darlene Pajak also have a sister Kylie, 19, who was a former rabbit queen, and a sister Alia, 14.

The Pajaks' immersion into rabbit culture began nine years ago when a friend gave them some pet rabbits. The siblings joined 4-H and found out that their rabbits were not purebred, a requirement for showing. By this time, they realized they wanted to show rabbits so they purchased some New Zealand Whites and some Holland Lops.

"We didn't have much luck with the Holland Lops, but we continued with the New Zealand Whites," Chelsea said.

"A few years ago, I fell in love with Beverens, a breed of white rabbits with blue eyes," Chelsea said. "So we raise them, and a breed called Champagne D'Argents, which are born all black but turn to silver coloring as they grown older."

The Pajaks now have 100 head and compete at many different shows. At the Farm Show, Chelsea took best of breed and best in six classes. She also received several classifications.

"We each take care of our own rabbits, but we help out each other too," Chelsea said of daily rabbit care. "We make deals with breeding and split the litters."

"I love it," Chelsea said of raising rabbits. "They calm me. Rabbits are real therapy when I'm upset."

"Yeah," Julia said. "If we don't know where Chelsea is, we can find her with her rabbits."

Chelsea said that working with rabbits has given her a desire to become a veterinarian. This summer, Chelsea plans to receive a license to judge rabbit shows. She serves as a rabbit reg-

On The 'Moove' With Dairy Knowledge

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The most asked question iis "How do you tell the difference between a male and female cow?" Pennsylvania Dairy Princess Melinda Wolfe said after spending at the Pennsylvania Farm Show.

Young and old Farm Show visitors seem to lack basic knowledge about farm animals and the behind-the-scenes requirements to operate a farm.

"It's sad how little people know. And it's hard to explain agriculture to people who have no concept of the industry," Melinda said.

"The biggest challenge is helping younger kids understand where milk comes from. They are so insistent that milk comes from stores," the 19-year-old dairy princess added.

Wearing a tiara and banner, the princess attracted the attention of the crowd.

"I want people to see that this is a working title, not a beauty queen contest," Melinda said about herself and the 34 other county dairy princesses who promote the dairy industry. County dairy princesses worked throughout the week at the booth under the auspices of Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc.

"We (dairy princesses and the PDPPS board) put a lot into the quizzes and game wheel to help kids better understand farming concepts," Melinda said.

While the knowledge the non-farming community has about agriculture is disturbing, Melinda also thrives on the opportunity to help tell agriculture's story to be featured in an upcoming issue.

Dairy promotion "mooves" throughout Farm Show festivities with this group of representatives from the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services, Inc. education.

To acquire the designation, Mandie competed with 16 other applicants at the state contest, which later qualified her to compete at the national level. The competition required an application, interview with judges, a 3-5 minute prepared speech, and an answer to an impromptu question at the youth banquet.

Mandie's impromptu question required her to elaborate on the reason for participating in DHIAR (Dairy Herd Improvement Association Registry) and the linear appraisal system used to classify goats on scale.

Mandie said she encourages involvement with DHIAR and the appraisal system because it helps when choosing bloodlines to improved herd characteristics.

"I felt very calm when answering the impromptu question," Mandie said.

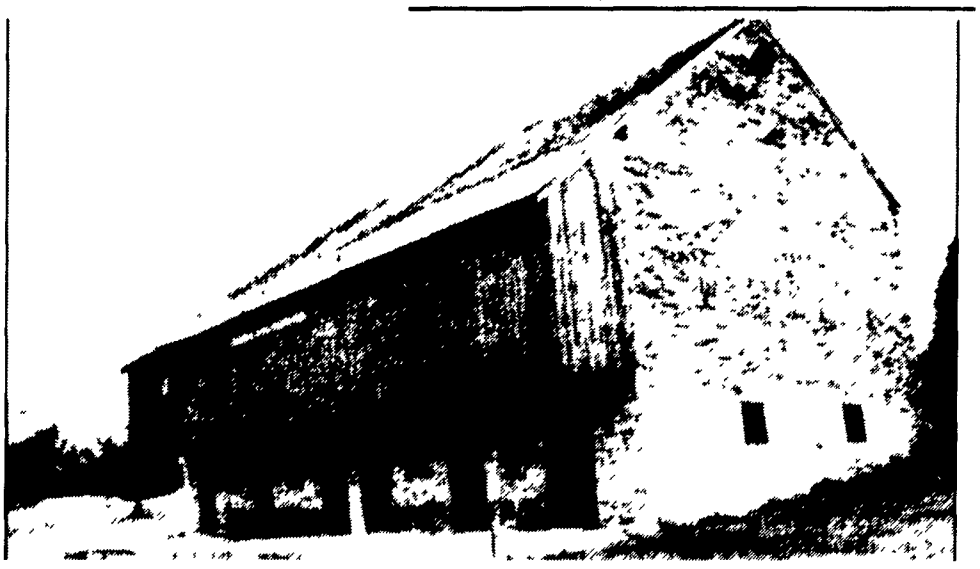
No doubt her many leadership roles in her school's extracurricular activities prepared her. A senior at Yough High School, Mandie is president of Students Against Drunk Driving, member of Student Council, Community Action program, honor student, and serves on the senior committee.

Next year, Mandie plans to attend Penn State Fayette Campus to study ag business and equine therapy.

"I've been through physical therapy myself and know its importance and I love horses, so I wanted to combine the two," she said.

"I'll take the first semester off so that I can fulfill the duties of my reign," Mandie said. Some of the shows she will attend as the national youth goat representative are as far away as Massachusetts and Oregon.

"I've wanted to be the youth representative ever since I met one when I was eight years old," Mandie said. "I'd like to keep my goats and become a licensed judge."



Pennsylvania barns like the one above will be featured in a program, "The Search for the Origin of the Pennsylvania Barn." 30 Years Of Dedication Recognized At Folk Festival

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Francis "Skimmer" Wilson and his wife Mary have missed only one Farm Show in the past 30 years and only because the Governor declared a state emergency due to inclement weather. The Wilsons' commitment to teaching and their love of folk dance was recognized at the Square and Folk Dance Festival and Contest, as part of the 85th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

The special recognition all began as a dream during last year's Farm Show. The family decided that it would be a very special event if four generations of the family all danced together this year. The dream was realized when four generations of the Wilson Family, ranging in age from 10-years-old to 77-years-old, walked into the Large Arena in the magenta colored costumes they designed.

John Gianelli, a representative from State Senator Robert C. Jubelier's office, presented a special citation to the Wilsons. State Representative Dick Hayes also sent a certificate of recognition for the couple. County extension agent, Dwayne Hay, who works with the Wilsons through 4-H, presented a woven blanket as a thank you on behalf of their 4-H folk dance students and Bedford County.

The Wilsons are the heart of folk dancing in Bedford County. Their self-started 4-H club pays a monthly dues of a $1, which goes toward refreshments at lessons. For years, the Wilsons have been providing costumes and transportation with the help of the Friends of 4-H to all the students interested in participating in the program. Last week, their 4-H'ers entered in the Division B (15- 25-year-old category). Mrs. Wilson watched intently as her students performed; she was thrilled when they were awarded a blue ribbon. Four Generations, the team name for the Wilsons, also won a blue ribbon at the competition.

When not teaching their weekly folk dancing lessons or traveling to a demonstration, Mary enjoys doing genealogy work for friends, family, and churches. She also enjoys gardening. According to Mary, "Skimmer" goes to breakfast with his friends three times a week and is in charge of the housework.

Jason White of Selinsgrove, Snyder County, was also recognized at the festival. White is a 95-year-old dancer who began dancing at the young age of 87. Before his division's final dance, the announcer asked him to take a bow.

Raising rabbits is a family affair for the Pajak family who have more than 100 of the furry purebreds. Chelsea, 17, is the state rabbit queen, her sister Julia,11, is princess, and another sister Kylie (not available for photo) was a former rabbit queen. Parents Fred and Darlene Pajak and Alia, 14, are also involved in promotion and showing.

istrar for shows, which helps her gain knowledge and learn .

Both sisters are appalled at the lack of knowledge many visitors reveal at places like the Farm Show. Again and again, they need to prevent people from picking up rabbits by the scuff of neck.

"That breaks the skin away from the muscle," which is a negative when it comes to showing rabbits.

Unfortunately many pet care booklets teach people to pick rabbits up by the scuff of the neck.

"Pet care is different than show care," Julia said.

The rabbits are raised outside year-round. "Some people think that is cruel, but rabbits actually prefer cold weather over heat. It would be like us sitting around in fur jackets in 80-degree weather," Chelsea said.

To cool the rabbits during summer months, they are given ice bottles. Water freezing during the winter months does not present a problem, as the rabbits eat the ice.

Chelsea and Julia are active members of the Pennsylvania State Rabbit Breeders Association (PA-SRBA).

Chelsea also holds the title of National New Zealand Rabbit Queen, and she placed third in national competition for Rabbit Queen.

Luzerne County Teen Crowned Draft Horse Queen

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Carrie Martin of Dallas, Luzerne County was crowned Draft Horse Queen by the Pennsylvania Draft Horse and Mule Association at the 85th Pennsylvania State Farm Show.

During her time as Draft Horse Queen, the 17-year-old daughter of Wendy Martin plans to promote the draft horse industry and to assist in a number of draft horse shows and fairs, especially the Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

Carrie is a junior at West Side Area Vocational-Technical School. Upon graduation, she would like to seek a career as either a physical therapist, specializing in therapeutic riding for physically challenged children, or as a member of the Mounted State Police.

She has spent four years driving draft horses through 4-H, winning state draft horse competitions in 1998 and 1999. Martin's favorite breed to drive is Percheron, preferring to drive "Tanner Dan" in Single Cart, and "Tanner Dan" and "Skyeview Andre Did It" in Youth Team competitions.

The Draft Horse Queen competition involves writing a resume and essay explaining what each contestant would do as queen. The writings are then evaluated by a panel of judges from the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Draft Horse and Mule Association.

An obstacle course provided challenges to both horses and drivers alike as the teams navigated over boards, backed through and weaved around cones, or eased around a barrel. Photo by Michelle Ranck

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Computerization never fails to amaze me.

Delight me. Please me. Confuse me. Frustrate me. Make me madder...oh, sorry, I got carried away there. See, that's just how computers affect some of us.

Others, it affects even worse. Like the tales which float around about people putting their foot through their monitor screens or pitching a keyboard in frustration.

So I have this new printer, see. Which looks just like the old printer, bearing a slightly different model number. It was installed with great reluctance, mainly due to my long-held computer philosophy: once you have stuff working together correctly, don't mess with it if at all possible. Because it will inevitable foul up the whole thing.

Which is why, when the old printer began to drag and sputter and cough and choke, I held it's hand. Stroked its buttons. Babied it along. Said the occasional prayer over it as I hurriedly printed out copy or a farm check to meet some deadline.

But then came that day of reckoning that we all ultimately face.

Technology death. And with a batch of farm checks to print and a deadline looming within hours, the printer refused to jet out one drop of ink onto the waiting sheets of paper. Refused to even pick up the paper. Just sat there and made gagging noises of suffocation and ebbing life.

This at 5 a.m., I might add.

So I promptly took to unplugging pronged plugs and unraveling the macrame of wires and cords which had woven around themselves over the past nearly four years since this system was installed. Along with brushing away dust which had accumulated in hard to reach spots. And began carefully unpacking the big box, which had been waiting in the sidelines for a few weeks, in anticipating of having to "pull the plug" on the ailing inkjet.

Knowing that the end was near, an almost-twin to the one already in the system had been purchased a few days earlier, when it turned up at a fantastic price in a local retail center. Skeptical, I had grilled the clerk as to whether the sale model was being discontinued and if even ink cartridge replacements would be available for it in the future.

"M'am, so far as I know, there is no plan to drop this model," answered the gentleman to my half-kidding, half-serious inquiry, then quickly adding in self-defense, "But if in three months they do, please don't come back after me!"

So I plugged in the cords, plugged in the installation disk, plugged in all the proper answers to the questions that came on the screen and — viola! — was back inkjetting by 6 a.m. And feeling pretty smug about it all.

In the urgency to get up and running and make sure that parts A, B, and C were compatible and would indeed, write the checks we needed to get in the mail, I put off dealing with on-screen registration, which came up, opting for the "register later" (procrastination) option.

Sure enough, when I logged on just now, up popped a screen reminding me that my procrastination time was up. So, I obediently plugged the info into the data boxes — country, address, use, etc. — and, not being logged into cyberspace at the moment, hit the buttons to print out the registry to FAX to the printer firm. And out of my new printer, which has been functioning beautifully up to this point, came flying sheets of paper bearing computer gobbledy-gook, brackets and checkmarks, and assorted letters, numbers, question marks (appropriate). And hearts. Lots and lots of hearts.

The doggone thing kept sucking up and spewing out sheet after sheet of paper, some with a string or two of the jargon, some just zipped through. Even trying to print normal copy, which had printed before came out as the same mumble-jumble.

Enough! I shut down the system, then booted back up. It printed this, just as nicely as you please. Go figure.

Maybe it's a late Y2K, or maybe its a more timely Y2001 glitch. Maybe all those hearts were an early Valentine.

Wonder how long that procrastinator mode can be stretched out?

Yogurt And Your Health

Report shows yogurt may be even better for your health than you thought

As a pediatrician and a father of eight, Dr. William Sears says that he is personally and professionally concerned that his family eats healthy and nutritious foods at both snack and mealtimes.

"So yogurt — calcium-rich and a good source of protein — has always been a mainstay at my house. The kids love the taste and variety, and I feel comfortable knowing it's giving them a nutrition boost," Sears said.

A new study from Tufts University gives even more reason to feel good about eating yogurt. The study, published in the "American Journal of Clinical Nutrition," by Dr. Simin Meydani, shows that yogurt's refreshing appeal and convenience may help make the immune system more resilient.

Dr. Meydani's review of the research on the health attributes of yogurt indicates that given the right circumstances, eating yogurt may help protect the intestinal track. The future holds great promise on yogurt's potential as a protective anti-infection agent.

There are endless ways to put yogurt on your family's favorite foods list, including these kid-pleasing creations included in today's selection of recipes.

Be forewarned: Not all yogurts are created equal. Heat-treated yogurts do not retain their live and active cultures, and therefore don't offer the same attributes as live and active cultures.

Tuna Rafts combines nutrition, taste, and eye appeal.

TUNA RAFTS

¼ cup plain yogurt
½ teaspoon curry powder (optional)
¼ teaspoon onion powder
6-ounce can tuna, water-packed, drained
2 tablespoons raisins
2 English muffins, split
½ cup cheddar cheese, grated
Chopped chives, optional

Stir yogurt, curry powder, if desired, and onion powder together in medium-size mixing bowl.

Add tuna and raisins to yogurt mixture and stir until combined.

Top each English muffin with ¼ cup tuna mixture and sprinkle with cheese and chives, if desired.

PEANUT BUTTER (NO JELLY) DIP

1 cup plain yogurt
¼ cup smooth peanut butter
2 tablespoons milk

Combine yogurt, peanut butter, and milk until evenly mixed and smooth.

Serve with baked chicken nuggets or fish sticks.

LEMON-BLUEBERRY WAFFLE TOPPER

2 cups blueberries, fresh or frozen
1 cup lemon yogurt
4 toaster waffles

Rinse and drain blueberries.

Place ¼ cup yogurt and ¼ cup blueberries on each waffle.

DIP A VEGGIE DOO DA DIP

2 cups fresh vegetables (broccoli, peppers, mushrooms, cauliflower, baby carrots)
1 cup plain yogurt
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ envelope dry, powdered salad dressing mix

Wash, peel, and chop vegetables into bite-size pieces.

Stir yogurt, mayonnaise, and salad dressing mix together; cover and keep refrigerated.

YOGURT CHEESE

1 cup plain nonfat or lowfat yogurt

Do not use yogurt with gelatin added.

Line a strainer with a double thickness of clean cheesecloth, three layers of paper towels, or three paper coffee filters. Spoon yogurt into the strainer. Place strainer over a bowl to catch the liquid that drains from the yogurt. Cover the strainer with plastic wrap and refrigerate 6-12 hours. The longer the yogurt is allowed to drain, the thicker it becomes. Makes approximately ½ cup yogurt cheese.

HOMEMADE YOGURT

To make one quart yogurt: Stir together one quart milk with ⅓ cup milk powder, if desired.

Heat milk to 180 degrees, stirring constantly. Use a candy thermometer to measure temperature. Remove milk from heat; let cool to 115 degrees. This takes about 1 to 2 hours, depending on the temperature of the rest of the house.

Stir in 2 tablespoons yogurt starter. Mix thoroughly. Pour the milk/yogurt mixture into sterilized jars. Incubate for 4-12 hours, or until it is set. The longer you incubate, the more sour the yogurt will be. Refrigerate until cool.

How to incubate: There are lots of methods. One is to fill an ice chest with the hottest water the tap will give me, place the jars of yogurt in the chest and close the lid. This is inexpensive, and doesn't require much storage space. If the water cools during incubation, as it might if it's cool in your home, refill with hot water.

It only takes about 15 minutes hands-on time, and the savings is considerable.

Yogurt Ideas

- Add sugar and fruit to yogurt for a snack.
- Plain yogurt can be used as a non-fat sour cream substitute.
- Add ⅓ cup plain yogurt to packaged macaroni and cheese, instead of milk and butter, for a tangy taste.
- Try adding some yogurt to mashed potatoes in place of some of the butter and milk.

Flower Show To Make Philadelphia Greener

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Flower Show, known to gardeners everywhere as the region's harbinger of spring and the nation's premiere gardening event, plays another significant role as catalyst for change throughout the City of Philadelphia. The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Show producer, invests Show revenues in thousands of community greening projects through its Philadelphia Green Program.

Philadelphia Green, the nation's largest and most comprehensive urban greening program, reaches out to all areas of the City by working with organized community groups on neighborhood greening projects and working with public agencies and private corporations for greening improvements in highly visible public areas.

"People often don't realize the impact the Flower Show has on the City of Philadelphia all year round," says J. Blaine Bonham, Jr., the Society's vice president, programs. "Last year, more than $1 million of revenues from the Flower Show went to support the efforts of Philadelphia Green."

With additional funding from the Pew Charitable Trusts, the William Penn Foundation, the City of Philadelphia, and other public and private sources, Philadelphia Green provides plants, materials and technical assistance to more than 800 organized community groups who help green Philadelphia year-round. The staff helps neighborhood residents transform trash-strewn vacant lots into community gardens and turn barren blocks into tree-lined streets. The program has worked on more than 2,000 projects, which include large neighborhood parks, small sitting parks, and vegetable and flower gardens.

Through its public landscapes efforts, Philadelphia Green has rehabilitated areas such as the 26th Street Gateway leading into Center City from the Philadelphia International Airport, the Azalea Garden behind the Museum of Art, median strip plantings along Spring Garden Street, and more. Philadelphia Green is also developing landscape rehabilitation projects at the Philadelphia Museum of Art and Penn's Landing along the Delaware River.

"Greening can be an amazing catalyst for change," adds Bonham. "Through our work we've seen drug infested parks turned into community assets, trash-strewn vacant lots transformed into community gardens, and industrial wastelands revitalized. But most amazing is the effort by residents to improve their neighborhood environments."

Initiated in 1974 as a small community garden pilot program, Philadelphia Green has grown into the leading urban greening program in the nation and is a model for programs in other cities around the country. Most recently, through the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, has led the charge to address the use of urban vacant land by producing Urban Vacant Land: Issues and Recommendations, the first national study detailing the challenges, opportunities and impact of urban vacant land.

For the past 25 years, PHS has worked side by side with community groups, the City, and residents to address community needs to improve the quality of life. By reclaiming vacant lots and providing organizational assistance, more than 800 neighborhood groups working at more than 3,000 sites have seen the difference that this type of support can accomplish. It's the same story over and over — criminals move on, children have safe places to play, people are inspired to meet their neighbors, housing programs become possible and a neighborhood begins to climb back to normalcy.

In 1999, PHS released the first of a series of studies on Vacant Land Management for the City of Philadelphia. The Cost/Benefit Analysis study determined the cost effectiveness of the City maintaining the vacant lots. The goal of the study is to adopt a realistic, cost-effective system through which all vacant land is maintained until an appropriate long-term use for each parcel is found. In 20 years, the City would earn $1.54 for every $1 invested into the project over time.

Working with Philadelphia's OMG Center for Collaborative Learning and the Pennsylvania Environmental Council, the Society assembled the study to outline the problems, offer solutions, and most of all, to encourage city governments to develop new vacant land management policies.

Through its Neighborhood Open Space Management program, Philadelphia Green is currently working with several community development corporations (CDCs) and other neighborhood-based organizations in Philadelphia to incorporate vacant land into their overall development plans. With help from the Philadelphia Green program, these organizations are beginning to look at vacant land as an opportunity to improve the quality of residents' lives with parks, gardens and recreational areas.

The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society is also the headquarters for the American Community Gardening Association (ACGA). For more information on greening programs around the country, please write to ACGA, 100 North 20th Street, 5th Floor, Philadelphia, PA 19103-1495.

Family Living Focus

Start A Tradition?

When was the last time you and your family sat down for a meal together? I don't mean a "special occasion" meal but just a run of the mill evening meal. If you are like most families, you're caught in a time crunch. Adults and youth may all hold jobs. There's sports practice, music lessons, chores, and homework. Of course there is the house to clean and clothes to wash and perhaps an older parent or relative to care for, and...

Research says family meals are important. University of Nebraska Family Life Specialist John DeFrain has found that one of the strengths of emotionally healthy families is spending time together. One characteristic of these families is eating meals together on a routine basis. Perhaps you need to be creative about those meals.

If you are not dining together as a family — before you set the table and ring the dinner bell, STOP! Decide your family priorities before squeezing one more thing into your schedule. Consider dropping at least one thing BEFORE you start planning family meals together.

Just sitting together at the table doesn't always lead to fascinating family conversations and warm mealtime memories. Here are some ideas for building family traditions, improving nutrition and reducing stress:

1. It's not "what" but "how" you feed your family — Simple foods served with love and laughter will outshine gourmet goodies almost anytime. Meals do not need to be fancy to be shared as a family.

2. It doesn't have to be hot to be healthy — Tuna sandwiches, a salad and some frozen yogurt can be just as healthy for your family as something you slaved over at the stove.

3. Focus on food choices versus forcing food — Allow children to eat until they are full without forcing "one more bite" or a "clean plate." Children develop healthy eating attitudes through choice, not coercion.

4. Start slow, learn as you go — Don't try to go from no meals to nightly meals. Start with one or two meals together weekly. Find what works for your family and go from there.

5. Take turns talking with a "talking stick" — If everyone in your family talks at once, take a tip from the Native Americans and use the "talking stick."

Only the person with the "talking stick" does the talking. It could be a "talking spoon" or "talking cup." When our three children all start talking at once, they get silly and start raising their hands so they can have a turn speaking! They truly like to be a part of the conversation.

6. Don't answer the phone during mealtime — How often are your meals interrupted by the phone? If you can't stand to ignore a ringing phone, either unplug it or turn off the ringer. Use your answering machine or voice mail if you really need to know who is calling.

7. Turn off the TV — Encourage family members to relate to each other rather than to some image on the TV screen. If there is an "absolutely must see" show, tape it for a later viewing.

8. Get children involved in making meals — Children, especially younger children, tend to tune in more to meals they help prepare. If everyone's hungry and in a hurry when they get home at night, try cooking together with children over the weekend.

When you pass the spaghetti, remember that you are passing more than just food. You are passing love and unity to your family. If your family's life is on "fast forward," maybe it is time to hit the PAUSE button and enjoy several family meals a week!

ANSWER — Brenda Reinhart, Coopersburg, wanted a recipe for grape juice made with homegrown grapes. Thanks to Mary Lockard and Mrs. Ray Keeny, New Freedom, for sending a recipe.

Homemade Grape Juice

Wash grapes, place in kettle and pour water over grapes to within ½-inch from top. Boil until tender and strain. To each quart juice, add one pint water and ¾ cup sugar. (I prefer a little more water). Let come to a full boil and can, if desired.

To drain off the juice, put into a food mill placed over a kettle. Let drain. Put the food mill over another kettle and work the pulp through. Sweeten the pulp. This makes delicious grape sauce, which is good to eat alone or on cereal or ice cream.

Thanks to Cathy Christ, Gap, for sending this recipe.

Grape Juice

Remove grapes from stems to measure 20 cups. Put into large kettle. Add 8 cups water. Bring to a boil and cook 10 minutes. Drain but do not squeeze. Return to kettle and add 4 cups sugar. Bring to a full boil and remove from heat. Run juice through a double layer of cheesecloth. The more layers of cloth, the cleaner the juice. Can or freeze.

When we thaw after freezing, we usually dilute it with water. My friend Sue Bowman dilutes hers with half apple juice or half grape juice. She also gave me a great tip to help clean up the mess grape stains leave behind: dab a cloth with bleach and wipe up the purple dots.

ANSWER — Brenda Reinhart's sister-in-law wanted a recipe for Bread and Butter Zucchini. Thanks to Madeline VanLeuven from New Jersey for sending a recipe that she uses often.

Zucchini Pickles

2 pounds zucchini
2 small onions
¼ cup salt
2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons mustard seed
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon turmeric
3 cups vinegar

Wash zucchini and cut into thin slices. Peel and cut onions in quarters, then slice very thin. Add zucchini. Cover with water and add salt. Let stand two hours. Drain thoroughly. Bring remaining ingredients to boiling. Pour over zucchini and onions. Let stand two hours. Bring all ingredients to boiling point and heat 5 minutes. Pack boiling hot into hot jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Adjust caps. Process 15 minutes in boiling water bath. Cool.

Yields about four half pints.

ANSWER — Howard Burkholder, Marion, requested a recipe for sweet and sour pickled eggs. Thanks to Mary Lockard for sending the following recipe.

Sweet And Sour Eggs

Hard boil eggs and peel. Mix together:
1½ cups sugar
1 cup water
1 cup vinegar

Stir and heat mixture until sugar is dissolved. Add food coloring to reach desired color. May divide mixture to make different colors. Pour mixture over eggs and store in refrigerator. Ready to eat in 24 hours.

ANSWER — Kathryn Wear, New Castle, wanted a recipe for cashew crunch. Thanks to Diana Broskey, Howell, N.J., for sending a recipe that she has used for years.

Fancy Cashew Brittle

2 cups roasted, salted cashew halves with pieces
1 cup granulated sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon baking soda

In a 2-quart microwave-safe bowl, stir together nuts, sugar, and corn syrup. Microwave, uncovered, on high, until mixture is light brown, about 6-8 minutes, stirring well halfway through.

Meanwhile, grease a cookie sheet well with butter and set aside.

Using oven mitts, remove nut mixture from oven. It will be very hot. Stir in butter and vanilla. Continue to microwave, at high, 1½-2 more minutes. The mixture should become caramel colored.

Use oven mitts to remove the mixture from the microwave. Add the baking soda. Stir quickly until light and foamy and the baking soda is thoroughly mixed in. Immediately and very carefully, pour onto prepared cookie sheet and use the back of a spoon to spread out as quickly as possible. The brittle will be fairly thick.

Let the brittle stand until completely cooked, about 30 minutes. Break into pieces and serve. Store leftovers in an airtight container, preferably a tin, up to two weeks, depending on the humidity. Makes about 16 2½-3-inch pieces.

Cook's Notes: If you have whole cashews, break into halves before starting. The hot candy will be easier to pour onto cookie sheet if you use a 2-quart glass measure that has a handle. Either way, be sure to use oven mitts. The candy is very hot.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Our big family gathering was postponed from December to January. We heeded the weatherman's report and then we did not even get a snowflake. But, our daughter in New Jersey got 22-inches the day that we planned to have people drop-in at our home.

Over the years, the group has changed as some of the older folks are no longer able to come. But, we are adding many young children who enjoy each others company. Some grandchildren only see each other once or twice a year as they live so far away.

We never know if we'll have 10 or 50. So, Allen helps me prepare food and move furniture. This year we had a jolly group of 35 young and old relatives.

We have received so many gifts this year that we shall have a hard time finding a place for everything. My husband was given a Coleman rechargeable lantern and a fish finder. I got a stadium seat with a special pad seat that can be heated in the microwave or cooled in the freezer. It certainly is a different gift. One daughter gave me 16 beautiful glasses with a note telling me to use them everyday. You see, just now I use an assortment of tumblers that have been clouded by hard water.

We were given food and more food from a large tin of assorted popcorn to an extra large tray of meat and cheese. Thank goodness for our freezers as we can store edibles until spring or even summer.

Now, I want to turn the collar on one of my husband's plaid shirts and then he can wear it for another year or two. There is always work to do.

Lancaster Society 18

In the lovely home of Hostess Maggie Carper, Farm Women of Society #18, enjoyed a unique and very personal Christmas meeting on Dec. 9.

Martha Stoner had devotions.

Members answered roll call with sharing a special Christmas memory.

At the business meeting, delegates volunteered to attend the State Convention at the Penn Harris Hotel in Harrisburg.

Farm women there associate with others of like mind. They always find new interests and hear and see creative ideas and return to share them at their next meeting.

Refreshments were delicious and the exchange of gifts required each wrapped package to weigh one pound. Fourteen ladies sang Christmas songs before disbanding.

Lancaster Society 20

On Dec. 7, Lancaster Farm Women #20 met at the home of Dorothy Eckman with Helen Tout as co-hostess. Following the luncheon including delicious Christmas cookies, Helen read the scripture taken from the second chapter of Luke. She read two poems, "Our Christmas Gift" and "So Remember." All joined in the Lord's Prayer and the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag.

The speaker was Dr. Albert Price who spoke on the topic "Safe Kid Coalition." He was accompanied by Don Trimble.

Following the reading of the minutes, Helen reported four cards had been sent. Five members will be attending the State Convention in January. For the Roll Call, all 16 members present answered by naming their favorite Christmas cookie.

Remarks were made by the out-going president, Valaria Ferguson, who then gave the gavel to the newly-appointed president, Nancy Lefever. The meeting closed by singing "Brighten the Corner."

The next event will be the Christmas Party at the Memorial United Methodist Church, Quarryville. The January meeting will be at the home of Barbara Stone with Marie Foose as co-hostess.

Lollipop Surpises Owner

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — After a heart-breaking New Year's Day, Joseph Sepiol experienced a turn-around in good fortune. After winning showmanship in his age group, the 10-year-old showed a Nubian boer cross that was named best breeding goat in youth competition at the State Farm Show last week.

Named Lollipop, the goat was an unexpected win.

"Not a chance," Joseph said before the show of the odds of winning the coveted title. Joseph had another goat that he was raising for the event. But it's death on Jan. 1 resulted in a sad day. He settled on what he thought was second-best for the show.

"Lollipop's mother was crippled and died. So we adopted her and bottle fed her every three hours for several weeks," Joseph said.

He explained that normally bottlefed babies don't do as well.

Judge Dr. Robert Herr pronouced the goat as very thick, well sprung, a meat goat with width capacity but still feminate in appearance," she said.

Joseph, three siblings, and his parents Mark and Michelle Sepiol raise about 30 head on their Wellsboro, Tioga County farmette. They raise both meat and dairy breeds. The milk is used by the Sepiol family and to raise the baby goats.

"He really deserves the award," his mom said of Joseph. "He's up before 6 a.m. every day and does his chores no matter what. He never needs to be reminded."

The Sepiols said that they purchased their first goat about 10 years ago. "We showed cattle, but we wanted goats because cattle are too large for them when they are younger."

Best doe in the youth division went to Der-Car RCLL Jelly's Julia exhibited by Derrick Carpenter, Newville, Cumberland Co. The Toggenburg competed against the Alpine champion doe owned by Todd Biddle, the La Mancha champion doe owned by Joel Weikel, and the Nubian champion shown by Jane Schalitzky.

The grand champion showman over all age groups was Larry Ansell, Fayette County.

After his favorite goat died, Joseph Sepiol, 10, didn't think he even had a chance to win best breeding goat, but Lollipop proved otherwise. Joseph's dad, Mark Sepiol holds the banner.

Tips For Beginning Investors

RUTGERS, N.J. — Many people have recently started to invest for the first time.

Here are some tips for successful investing: Develop an "investor's mindset" when switching from savings products such as certificates of desposit to investments such as growth funds.) Savers can expect no loss of principal and regular interest payments. Investors must accept a potential loss of principal and irregular pay outs.

Match the time frame of financial goals to investment characteristics. Stocks have historically outperformed other investments over long time periods and are recommended for long-term goals like retirement. On the other hand, stocks are very volatile and often lose value during short time frames. If a financial goal is less than three to five years away, select alternative investments such as Treasury securities.

Dollar cost average investment purchases to reduce the average cost. Mutual funds are ideally suited for dollar cost averaging. Simply invest a fixed amount such as $100 at a regular time intervals. Take advantage of tax-advantaged investments. Examples include individual retirement accounts (IRA's), rental real estate, tax-deferred employer retirement plans such as 401K's, annuities, and the purchase of a home.

Review your tolerance for investment risk. Consider how much loss of investment principal you could stand without losing sleep. Never invest in products you don't understand or feel comfortable with. If you can't explain an investment simply to a friend, you probably don't understand it well yourself.

Invest in tax-exempt securities, such as municipal bonds, if they provide a higher after-tax rather than taxable securities. Divide the available tax-exempt rate by one minus your tax bracket such as 15-28 percent. This provides its taxable equivalent. For example, a five percent tax-exempt bond provides the equivalent of 6.94 percent (5 divided by .72) to persons paying the 28 percent tax rate. If taxable investments pay less than 6.94 percent, buy a tax-exempt product.

Diversify your investment portfolio. Purchase different types of investments such as stocks and bonds or shares of unit trusts or mutual funds that contain many securities.

Increase your investment knowledge with periodicals like "Money" and "The Wall Street Journal." Other information sources include certified financial planners, adult education courses, and investment clubs.

Review your investments regularly and replace poor performers. Repositioning of assets should also be considered when financial goals are achieved and to adjust to changes in the economy or personal circumstances such as marriage or divorce.

Prepare For 'R' Day

RUTGERS, N.J. — On Friday, you get up in the morning and go to work, just as you have every day for the last 30 years. On the following Monday and every day after, you don't.

Welcome to retirement and living the good life you hope.

Unless you've won a million dollars in a lottery or game show, it's going to be more complicated. It certainly takes more time if you want to retire successfully.

Think of retirement as a mountain to climb and that, in all likelihood, it's going to take you three years to get to sunshine on the other side. Specifically, those three years are the year before you retire, the year that you retire, and your first full year of retirement.

Much of a person's retirement planning the year before retirement should be spent tying up loose ends. Your employer should be informed of your plans to retire as well as the retirement plan administrator that you will be withdrawing money from the plan instead of adding.

Next, there is life and disability insurance to review. You won't need disability insurance to replace your salary if you aren't earning one. The year prior to retirement is also the time to visit the Social Security office. You should get the paper work going at least 90 days ahead of your "R" date.

There is also a less tangible but real matter of preparing for retirement psychologically. For many people, we are what we do. We identify ourselves with our work. That final Friday, you were Professor Smith or the manager of a department store. On the next Monday, you are just plain John. That can take a lot of adjusting to.

The second year of the three-year window is when you are actually quitting. It is a year of planning your retirement cash flow. You don't want to wake up on day one asking, what have I done? I don't have enough money. I retired too early. Retirees won't have that anxiety if they have done their homework.

First, they must evaluate their Social Security, pensions, profit sharing, personal investments, and whatever other assets they have. Then, they must determine how much of this they can spend. All of their lives, they have been saving for a rainy day; now it's raining. From here, they must examine how much money is actually needed to live on. Many don't feel they need much money, but there are new activities to be discovered.

In all of this, retirees should look realistically at how long they are likely to need to provide income for. Chances are it could be a very long time depending on their age at retirement.

The third year, your first full year of retirement, is a time to re-evaluate. By this time you will have found out exactly what your monthly expenses are. You may have added some new ones like travel. You may sell your home and downsize. But on the other hand, you may "upsize" to something south of New Jersey.

Now you made it over the mountain.

YOU ARE INVITED!!!

Best Doe Is Team Effort At State Farm Show

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Maturity coupled with dairyness and a beautiful udder captured the eye of Mary Iager, judge for the State Goat Show last Thursday.

The Best in Show representing these characteristics was GCH Albonhaus Lilac, owned by Todd Biddle and shown by Erin Aiello, 14.

"It's a team effort," Biddle said of the Alpine doe bred by his mother Gail Biddle and raised by students at the Milton Hershey School, Hershey.

Biddle said 18 students from the school brought 23 head to compete with the 225 dairy goats registered for the show. A Biddle doe also was named champion of all other purebreds.

Competing for the best of show were the LaMancha champion shown by Joel Weikel, Blairs Mills; Nubian champion exhibited by Jane Schalitzky, Landisburg; Toggenburg champion and champion of the recorded grades exhibited by Joel Weikel.

A partial listing of goat show results follows:

At Arasapha Farm, Simple Ideas Help Renovate Damaged Pastures

ANDY ANDREWS

GRADYVILLE (Delaware Co.) — Sharpen the blade. Vary the mower height so no more than a third of the grass is cut. Ensure there is enough organic material in the soil.

Do those things, according to a pasture renovator and you can accomplish so much, said Tony Striedieck, Ornamental Landscaping Inc., Gradyville.

In the spring, Striedieck began work on renovating damaged pastures caused by overgrazing sheep on the family's Arasapha Farm.

Near the entrance to the farm several acres in pasture have had to endure abuse. The sheep Striedieck have grazed it down to nothing. On top of that, the area was used as a parking lot during several seasonal festivals.

To make matters even worse, the land endured a scorching drought. And improper lime too heavy in nitrogen, damaged the actual soil makeup.

But it's the simple things Striedieck concentrates on. He noted that cutting the grass right has the equivalent effect of applying high quality fertilizer, at least with his experience down south.

In Florida, where he received lots of training, Striedieck noted that turf is serious business, he said

I recently had the occasion to meet and spend an afternoon with Dr. Burt Smith from the University of Hawaii. Dr. Smith specializes in pasture management. He worked with animals a good bit and has published a video on Basic Herding. Smith has also authored a book entitled "Moving em" which is a guide to low stress animal handling. After discussing some of Dr. Smith's points on animal handling, I decided to do a search of research papers on the subject. My search

Market Goat Champion Comes Full Circle

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Briana Shealer clinched the coveted champion market goat title in her last year of competition at the State Farm Show last week.

"It's full circle," the 18-year-old said when Dr. Robert Herr selected her Nubian/LaMancha/Boer crossbreed named Victor. "Dr. Herr judged the first competition I entered in 1996 and, now in my last year of showing, he was the judge again.

Both times, Herr selected Briana's goats as market champions for their good loin, thickness, length, and heavy muscled leg.

This year's win was a special honor to Briana because the champion was homebred. "It's more of an accomplishment," Briana said of using a homebred to compete against those purchased nationally.

Briana and her brother raise 11 goats and other livestock on the family's Auburn, Schuylkill County farm named Evergreen Tree Farm (which supplied the Christmas tree to the White House).

Briana said the champion was not bottle fed. "They are often sturdier when they stay on their mother but wilder."

Although Victor was almost impossible to corral in the pasture, he tamed considerably within three to four days, much to Briana's surprise and delight.

Next year, Briana plans to study animal science at Penn State. "I want to operate a ranch or work for the Department of Agriculture," Briana said of long-range goals.

No matter what her career, Briana plans to become a 4-H leader. "I was a 4-H'er since I was 8, and I want to give back to the program," she said.

"It was my dad's brainy idea that I get into goats," Briana said of her venture into goat competition about 10 years ago.

Her dad, an extension agent for Carbon County, countered, "That's because Briana cried for weeks after her pig sold when she was 8. I wanted something she could show and bring home."

Briana continues to show pigs and sheep, but she no longer cries. "I still miss them when they are sold, but I realize the purpose is to raise livestock for food, and there are plenty of other animals on the farm," she said. Nonetheless, she's happy she got into goat projects.

"I'll show at our local fair, but I won't be showing here again. So I'm glad to go full circle," Briana said.

In her first and last year of showing goats at the state level, Briana Shealer clinched the champion market lamb title. "It's full circle," Briana said of the win with her homebred crossbreed goat named Victor. Briana's dad, Paul Shealer, holds the banner.

Gentle Giants Draw Large Crowd To Farm Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — People came to the Pennsylvania Farm Show to see some of the biggest and strongest Draft Horses pull up to 4,000 pounds on a dynamometer. A dynamometer is a truck that is rigged especially for weight pulling contests.

Among the contestants was "Mike" a 5-year-old; 2,550-pound Belgian gelding that stands 20 hands (one hand equals four-inches) high (six -feet eight-inches high). Mike's teammate is "Tom" a 18.2 hand (a six-feet two-inches high) 8-year-old Belgian gelding, the team is owned by Larry Conffer of Sigel. The team has had a very successful year placing in several competitions all over the state.

The winning team in the Light Weight Division was owned by Ira Kessler and Son, of Millerton, this team's left hand horse, "Duke," was 21-years-old and in his seventeenth pulling season. Brindle's Team pulled the standing record of 3,600-pounds a full pull of 27½-feet and decided not to go for a new record.

The Heavy Weight Division winner of the night was George Brindle Jr. of Chambersburg; he pulled the standing record of 4,000-pounds the full 27½-feet, but decided not to pull again for a new record. Both Kessler and Brindle received a $400 prize and a plaque. The following placed accordingly:

Light Weight Division: 1. Ira Kessler and Son of Millerton, PA. 2. Ira Kessler and Son of Millerton, PA. 3. The Brown Brothers of Corry, PA. 4. Bill Howard of Acme, PA — Horsemanship Award. 5. Bobby Howard of Acme, PA.

Heavy Weight Division: 1. George Brindle Jr. of Chambersburg, PA. 2. Chris Hawley of Spartansburg, PA — Horsemanship Award. 3. Victor Bonacassio of Rochester Mills, PA. 4. Sam Hawley of Spartansburg, PA. 5. Jeff Martin of Punxsutawney, PA.

Another award that is given to one competitor in each division is the Horsemanship Award. This award is given for thinking of the horse, rather than the weight or distance, during the pull. In the Light Weight Division 18-year-old Bobby Howard received this award.

When Bobby's horses were struggling, he pulled them back, gave them a minute to settle down, then let them pull again. This was kinder to his horses and in turn gave him a better distance in the end. Bobby has been coming to the horse pull since he was five and has worked his way up from Pony Pulling to the Heavy Weight Draft Division.

In 1997, Bobby set the record of 3,600-pounds in the Light Weight Draft Division. This year he received the Horsemanship Award with his father's team in the Light Weight Division.

For the Heavy Weight Division, Chris Hawley received the Horsemanship Award. Chris, like Bobby, had the patience and knowledge of how to have his horses, "Rocket" and "Prince," perform their best and in the safest possible way. Chris is a sophomore at Corry Area High School he has been coming to the Farm Show since he was eight and this is his third year competing in the Horse Pull.

Winter Sneezes

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Why do you sneeze in the winter? In the colder months, we spend approximately 90 percent of our time indoors. This may expose us to health risks caused by indoor air pollution. The amounts of contaminants in the air can change air quality.

Your home contains many naturally-occurring pollutants that come from living sources-called "house dust."

House dust isn't dust that blows from outside, its produced indoors and is caused by the breakdown and release of plant and animal materials used in the home. These could include feathers, cotton, wool and animal hairs that may come from clothing, carpets, rugs and furniture. The stuffing material in mattresses, pillows, quilts and upholstered furniture is another source of house dust. And the scales from our own skin, animal dander, dust mites, saliva, molds, mildew, bacteria, viruses and pollen all combine to make even more house dust. Just by walking through a room, we can cause particles that have settled on the floor and other surfaces to move into the air. And that's when the sneezing or other reactions may occur.

By taking simple steps like regular cleaning, weekly washing of sheets, and regularly changing vacuum bags, you can help control those sneezes!

ANSWER — Mrs. J.W., Ashland, wants to know how to make pine cones that have a coating, which burn blue and green when place in a camp fire. Thanks to P. Thompson, Huntingdon, for sending a recipe that she writes is fun to try.

Scented Fire Starters

Pinecones
Paraffin
Red crayons
Cinnamon oil

Remove paper from crayons. Caution: Do not melt paraffin over an open flame or directly on burner. Melt paraffin in double boiler over hot water. Add pieces of crayon to paraffin until desired color is obtained. Add cinnamon oil (1 teaspoon per 1½ pounds paraffin). Holding pine cones with tongs, dip in paraffin, allowing it to dry between coats. Continue dipping until cones are well coated. Allow paraffin to harden completely.

To use as fire starters, place several pinecones under logs and light cones. These make wonderful gifts for friends with fireplaces, fun to use outdoors, or pretty displayed in a basket in your living room. If used for ornamental purposes, glitter can be lightly sprinkled on final layer of paraffin before it hardens completely.

ANSWER — Here are the words to the poem requested by Abe Gingerich, Free Union, Va. Thanks to Noah Yoder, Meyersdale, for sending the poem.

When Ma Is Sick

When Ma is sick, she pegs away
She's quiet though, not much to say.
She goes right on a-doing things,
An' sometimes laughs or even sings.
She says she don't feel extra well,
But then it's just a kind o' spell.
She'll be all right tomorrow sure,
A good old sleep will be the cure.
An' Pa he sniffs an' makes no kick,
For women folks is always sick.
An' Ma, she smiles, lets on she's glad
When Ma is sick, it ain't so bad.

When Pa Is Sick

When Pa is sick, he's scared to death
An' Ma and us just ' lds our breath.
He crawls in bed, an' puffs an' grunts,
An' does all kinds of crazy stunts.
he wants Doc Brown and mighty quick,
For when Pa's ill, he's awful sick.
He gasps and moans, an' sort o' sighs,
He talks so queer and rolls his eyes,
Ma jumps an' runs, an' all of us,
An' all the house is such a fuss.
An' peace and joy is mighty skeerce,
When Pa is sick, it's something fierce.

SUPPORT AND RESISTANCE AREAS, AND WILL THE MARKET GIVE US A SECOND CHANCE?

John Berry
Ag Marketing Educator
Lehigh County Extension

Among the most frustrating aspects of marketing are missed opportunities for good prices. These occur because of producers becoming overly optimistic.

This optimism stems from the belief that a bull market will keep going on. Ultimately, the market does change direction — it can do so many times before the producer has priced his crop.

This article examines where to draw additional support and resistance lines beyond trend lines. Some "will the market give me another chance" possibilities also are explored.

No market moves straight up or straight down. Even in a strong bull market, the market retrenches or takes a breather. When this happens, the market often breaks through the up trend line. The producer will not know if this simply is a breather before another up move, or the time to bail out. Speed resistance lines can be an important tool for answering this question.

The critical questions to ask are is the market all over or just taking a breather? If it is taking a breather, how far is it likely to fall before recovering?

The mathematical procedure is to measure the move. Let's say corn moves from $2 to $3. Our example move is up $1 in this case. Multiply that by 33 percent, or 33 cents in the example. Subtract this amount, 33 cents, from the high, $3. Place a dot representing 33 cents directly below the high and draw a line from the starting point of the move through the 33 percent dot on the graph. Draw in a 66 percent line. These new lines will become either support or resistance lines.

If the market falls down to the 33 percent line and does not close below the line for two consecutive days, the odds are the market will go back upward, using the 33 percent line as the new trend line or support line. This gives the producer a chance for higher prices.

If the market does not reach new highs, the 33 percent line generally will give producers a second chance to approach the previous highs. If the market, as shown in the illustration, falls through the 33 percent line, the 33 percent line then becomes an upper resistance line and the percent line becomes the lower support line. Since markets generally list both support and resistance lines, the odds are high the market will move downward to test the support levels on the 66 percent line. If it closes below the 66 percent line, a major down trend has been confirmed.

Usually, at this point, most producers are saying, "why didn't I do something?"

What are the odds the market will give producers another chance to recover at least part of what they missed? Since markets rarely continue on a straight downward movement, there is some chance to recover.

After a major downward move producers, along with the rest of the world, feel markets will go even lower. Historically, markets retrace some territory of a lost move. The odds indicate that after a major down move, prices will recover 40 percent of what was lost 60 percent of the time.

For example, if the market fell $1, it would recover 40 percent of that $1 fall 60 percent of the time. To continue the odds, 50 percent of a price will be recovered 50 percent of the time. In the example, 50 percent of the time producers could expect the market to come back $.50.

Consequently, there is a ⅓ chance the market would recover 60 percent of what was lost ($.65 in the example) when the market fell apart.

Watch the market closely when following a procedure.

If, for instance, the market explodes through the 40 percent line with vigor and enthusiasm, the odds are in its favor to reach the next level. But, if the market has a hard time getting through the 40 percent line and is in a minor sideways trend, the odds decrease that the market will recover to the next level.

Producers can use trend lines as indicators of how far the market will fall. After the fall, trend lines can be used to estimate recovery or continued downward movement. Predicting resistance and support lines gives producers a barometer to gauge the market.

Markets generally stall out in a major down trend and give producers a second chance to recoup some of the lost opportunity. To accomplish this, producers must watch the market carefully during retrenchment and not let hopes and wishes override solid marketing strategy.

Mid-Atlantic Fruit, Vegetable Convention Jan. 30-Feb. 1

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — As the new millennium truly gets under way in 2001, fruit and vegetable growers need the latest information on growing techniques, pest control, nutrition, marketing, and business management.

There is no better place for growers in the Mid-Atlantic region to learn the latest in "Growing in the New Millennium" than at the 2001 Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention in Hershey Jan. 30-Feb. 1.

About 2,000 people, mostly fruit and vegetable growers from throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and other states are expected to gather at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center for the convention. The event is jointly sponsored by the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, the Maryland State Horticultural Society, and the New Jersey State Horticulture Society.

This year the fruit growers will be joined by peach growers from across the nation as the National Peach Council will conduct its annual meeting at the convention as well.

The Great American Hall at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center will host the Trade Show with more than 130 exhibitors. The Trade Show is again expected to be completely sold out.

Six or more concurrent educational sessions will be offered on all three days of the convention. The following sessions are planned for the first day: tree fruits (including light relations, varieties, postharvest handling and insect control topics); season extension technology; back to basics; labor management; promising vegetable crops; leafy greens and herbs; wholesale marketing; greenhouse vegetables; sweet corn; organic production; potatoes; and wine grapes.

On the second day, sessions will cover tree fruit, peaches (including plum pox virus topics), roadside marketing, irrigation, general vegetables, bedding plants/perennials, potatoes, alternative markets, small fruit, snap beans, and computer use.

The convention will close on the third day with sessions on peaches (including varieties, handling and fertigation topics); family business management; pumpkins; melons/cukes/squash; tomatoes (processing and stake); small fruit; cut flowers; fall ornamentals; and marketing.

Besides the opportunity to attend the sessions of the National Peach Council, growers will have the option to attend two half-day workshop sessions. On the first day, Norine Larson from Minnesota will present a workshop on "Managing Teen and Senior Workers." On the last day, Dr. Cindy Iannarelli of Bridgeville, will present a morning workshop on "Keeping Your Family Business Peaceful and Profitable."

Many pesticide applicator update training credits are available to growers attending the sessions. The program covers nearly every aspect of fruit, vegetable, potato, and berry production. Commercial growers should not pass up this great educational opportunity.

On the first evening, fruit and vegetable growers will be treated to a reception followed by the annual Fruit and Vegetable Growers Dinner. The dinner will include awards, recognitions, and entertainment by the United Voices of Praise from Messiah College. On Jan. 31, the Pennsylvania Apple Marketing Board and the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association will each sponsor receptions for growers. The processing tomato growers with the highest yields for the 2000 season will be honored at the annual Tomato Awards Luncheon on the closing day, Feb. 1.

For more information on the fruit program and registration, contact Maureen Irvin, State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania, (717) 677-4184; William Tietjen, New Jersey State Horticultural Society (908) 475-6505; or Robert Black, Maryland State Horticultural Society (301) 271-7491.

For more information on the vegetable, potato, or bedding plant program and registration, contact William Troxell, Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association, (717) 694-3596.

Persons registered for either the fruit or vegetable program can attend all the sessions offered (fruit, vegetable, and small fruit sessions) and the trade show. Registration either through the mail or at the door is required to attend both the trade show and educational sessions.

Safety Training Workshop Feb. 17-18

BEAVER SPRINGS (Snyder Co.) — Pennsylvania staff is gearing up to train extension agents, FFA advisers, 4-H and FFA members, community health persons, and community leaders by sponsoring a statewide workshop, Partners For A Safer Community, on Feb. 17-18 at the Marriott in Harrisburg.

This conference will be held in conjunction with the FFA ACES Leadership Conference.

The program emphasizes health awareness and safety, but there are many aspects of the safety workshop which apply to the general population, such as ATV and gun safety.

The state training team in Pennsylvania believe that health and safety are very important topics. As such, the team believes in the need to increase safety awareness and distribute resource materials to many people at little or no cost.

The Partners For A Safer Community program puts the materials in the hands of rural leaders to promote safety and health-promoting behaviors among Pennsylvanians.

Along with the training, a box of instructional materials needed to teach safety (valued at more than $200) will be given to each safety team at no cost.

Many door prizes valued up to $25 each will also be offered to help teams begin building their safety material inventory. Teams will be trained to implement local safety programs and asked to sign a commitment to conduct a minimum of one safety activity within the next year.

The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is sponsoring the hotel fee, meals, registration, and materials for the workshop, so this very important farm safety program can be offered free of charge. A three- or four-member team should consist of one extension agent or FFA adviser, one 4-H or FFA member, one community leader, and one health care provider. Your health care provider may be your school nurse and can also serve as your community leader.

The estimated cost of the conference is $500 per team if the Department of Agriculture was not providing the funding. Due to the nature of the conference, only one team per county and one team per FFA chapter will be trained free of charge. Overnight accommodations will include a double room for adults and three to four per room for students.

To take advantage of this opportunity to promote and improve health and safety within your community, respond by Monday, Jan. 29 with reservations to West Snyder High School, Attn: Partners For A Safer Community, R.R. 1, Box 292, Beaver Springs, PA 17812.

Once the registration is received, you will receive a workshop confirmation, final agenda, and directions to the conference. If you have any questions, call Cynthia Shaffer at (570) 658-8144 or Kerry Richards at (814) 862-2134.

Rutgers, Penn State To Offer Program On Increasing Profitability By Producing, Marketing Quality Hay

BELVIDERE, N.J. — The hay market in New Jersey and Pennsylvania continues to increase because of a strong demand for hay for the equine industry.

Current data indicates that there are approximately 60,000 horses valued at $724 million in New Jersey and 170,000 horses worth $620,000 in Pennsylvania.

Hay prices in the Northeast continue to be among the highest in the nation. According to Tom Morgan of Morgan Research Group, hay demand was stable from 1992-1995, but has surged since 1996. Growing demand for meat and milk worldwide, as well as continual growth of the equine industry, provides a positive outlook for the demand for quality hay.

To help farmers produce high-quality hay that meets the needs of the current market, Penn State and Rutgers Cooperative Extension is offering a program, on "Increasing Farm Profitability By Producing And Marketing Quality Hay." The program will be Jan. 30 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, Phillipsburg, N.J.

Cost of the program is $30, which will cover registration, lunch, and handout materials.

Keynote speaker for the program is Michael Collins, University of Kentucky forage specialist, who will be discussing methods of increasing hay quality by properly drying the hay. Collins will describe his project for developing the on-farm drying units that are increasing in popularity in Kentucky and other states that experience frequent spring rains. He also will discuss the role and limitations of drying agents and hay preservatives.

Additional speakers will include Dr. Marvin Hall, Penn State forage specialist, who will outline management plans to balance forage quality, stand longevity, and yields. Rutgers University Forage Specialist Jeremy Singer will discuss methods of maximizing profits through nutrient management and species selection. Dean Morrell, New Holland North America, Inc., will discuss new developments in haymaking equipment.

Based on the results of a recent survey on hay buying practices, Donna Foulk, Rutgers Cooperative Extension, will present information on producing and marketing hay to the equine community. An additional workshop on advanced technologies in soil testing will be presented by Everett Chamberlain, Warren County Cooperative Extension, and Greg Solt, Northampton County Cooperative Extension.

For more information or to register by telephone, contact the Warren County Cooperative Extension Office at (908) 475-6503, the Hunterdon County Extension Office at (908) 788-1339, or the Northampton County Extension Office at (610) 746-1970.

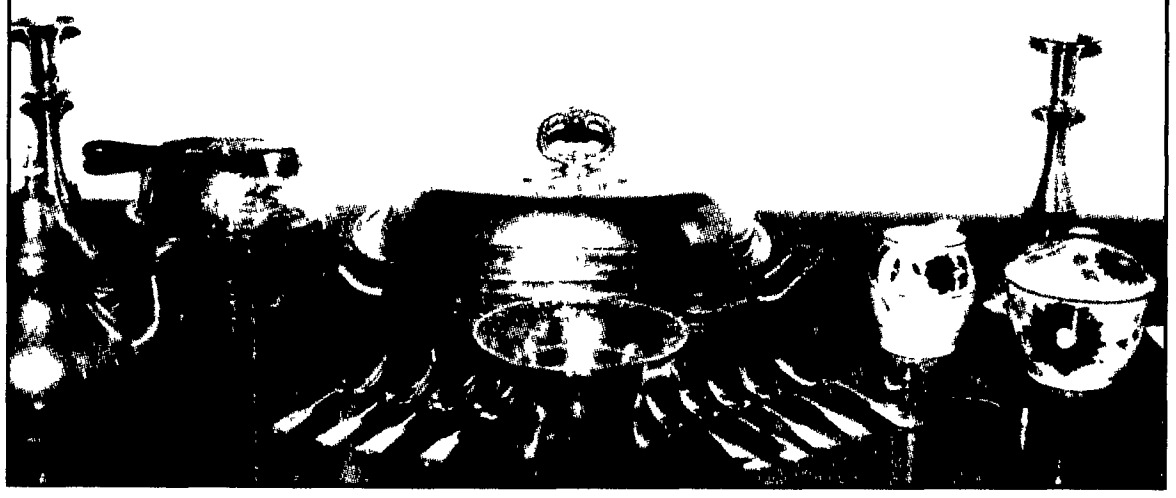
Antique Pewter Details Early American Life



A pewter chafing dish forms the centerpiece for this display of antique pewter collected by Richard Pencek. Each piece is museum quality and a tribute to early American craftsmanship.

Pewter whale-oil lamps became popular in the mid-1800s. Some pewterers included lamps in their line of pewter products Roswell Gleason (1830), Henry Hopper (1842-1847), Eben Smith (1840s), T. B. M. Co. (1830s), Israel Trask (1825-1842), and J. B. Woodbury (1837-1838). Other pewterers only made lamps Brook Farm (1841-1847), Capen & Molineux (1848-1853), Morey & Ober (1852-1854), Morey & Smith (1857), Samuel Rust (1837-1842), Thomas Wildes (1832-1840), and Yale & Curtis (1858-1867).

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEMONT (Centre Co.) — "Dignity of form, beauty of line, textural quality, and an exquisite soft brilliance," is how J. B. Kerfoot describes pewter in his book, "American Pewter."

Were you ever curious if early Americans really admired the beauty of pewter when they sat down to eat, or were they just glad to be rid of their wooden dinner plates?

To answer that question, one should know that before 1750, only wealthy Americans owned pewter. After 1750, and for the next 75 years, many Americans enjoyed household necessities made of pewter, especially tableware. More affluent Americans also imported fashionable items such as snuffboxes and buckles.

Pieces of pewter that survived hard use and being melted down during the Revolutionary War are in the caring hands of collectors or are up for grabs to the highest bidder.

Collectors search out and pay dearly for pewter pieces, not only for its beauty and soft brilliance, but also for the love of preserving and owning pieces of history, the challenge of identifying and documenting the craftsman who created the piece, and the opportunity to learn more about what these objects tell us about life during the past 200 years.

To the untrained eye, the heart and moon tabs on these pewter porringer bowls look the same, but a closer look reveals the work of several pewterers.

Richard Pencek, a Penn State professor who teaches Early Pennsylvania Decorative Arts and Furniture, is a serious collector whose home in Lemont, Centre County, is a testimonial to his expertise and tribute to early American lifestyle.

"I spend two days in class teaching about pewter. It reveals details about early American life. The unusual pieces are fascinating," Pencek explains. He looks through a small pewter mug with a clear glass bottom and to explain its purpose, he asks, "Want to make sure you know who shot you while you were drinking?"

Pencek added that the saying, "Watch your p's and q's," originated from the admonishment to watch how many pints and quarts you've drunk before you become a problem.

Pencek picks up a flagon and points to a fill line etched inside the rim. "Taverns were inspected and these were stamped to show that the right amount of wine was being served. A tavern could lose its license otherwise. Even European glasses had a line on them to make sure they were selling the right level of wine."

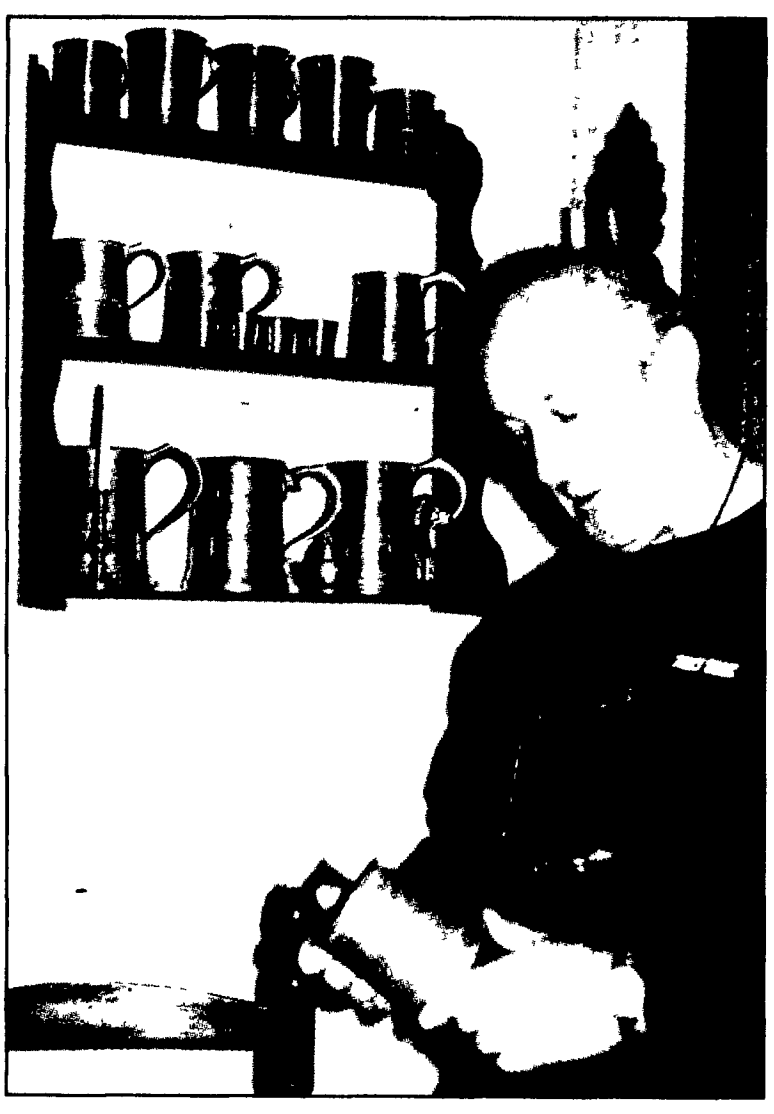
Even the clinking together of drinking vessels during a toast came from this era.

"During the 17th and 18th centuries, people were being poisoned. It became customary to pour a little of everyone's drink into everyone else's glass, which led to the tapping of glasses together during a toast."

While England had thousands of pewterers, the list of American pewterers has only slightly more than two hundred names with only half of whom

(Turn to Page B25)

Pewter snuffboxes were once popular, including the one shaped like a shoe for women. This teapot features a wooden handle.



Some things remain a mystery even to Dick Pencek, a student of both English and American pewter. This flask bears the mark of the familiar name Yates as well as an unfamiliar name — Crown.

Old Sporting Prints Grow In Popularity

English sporting prints were status art in America from the early 1900s to the 1920s. They went out of fashion until the 1970s. You'd see them hung on the walls of fancy private clubs and in the homes of the newly rich.

Once again, along with the country look in furniture and fashion promoted by Ralph Lauren, sporting prints are back in fashion.

Probably England is the only country where a portrait of the family horse or dog was accorded the same dignity as the ancestral portrait. Or, owners often had their portraits painted along with their favorite racing and hunting horses.

Originally done in oils and watercolors, they were later reproduced in the 19th century as sporting prints. As such they found a ready market among the growing number of wealthy country gentry and squires. The most popular subjects were hunting and horse racing. However, rarities today are those dealing with specialized sports such as cock fighting and cricket.

Racing prints by the most popular artists, such as Sir Alfred J. Munnings and George Stubbs, are more expensive than hunting subjects by the same artists. These in turn are more costly than their animal portraits or other field sport subjects, commissioned by the wealthy.

Prints of other sports have historical interest, since many depict the violent forms of entertainment popular in the 18th and 19th centuries. Among them cock fighting, dog fighting, bull-baiting, and bare-knuckle fighting. These now, illegal sports were captured by both English and French artists of the period.

Clues: Sporting prints have never stopped being reproduced. In the 1920s-1930s, restrikes (reproductions) were made and sold as originals. If framed, you can recognize them by their black glass framing, popular at the time. They were often "laid down" (pasted directly onto a backing material without hinging."

Again, in the 1970s, renewed interest among collectors and dealers imported new re-strikes from England.

When looking for early examples, use a strong magnifying glass or jeweler's loupe to see the tell-tale small dots that distinguish re-strikes. The earliest were hand painted. However, the 1970s restrikes were done with improved technical methods and are difficult to pinpoint. However, their borders are too white, unless artificially aged.

Among the names to look for are George Stubbs, Cooper Henderson, and Henry Alken. Stubbs was the first English animal painter to draw and paint directly from nature. Cooper Henderson is considered the last of the old school of sporting artists. He specialized in coaching scenes. Henry Alken, originally signed his name "Ben Tally O." Many of his early pictures were satirical.

A large folio of Alken's works, published in 1821, in the "National Sports of Great Britain" contained 50 large plates engraved by T. Clarke, after Alken. It was from this folio that hundreds of restrikes were made, flooding the market in the 1920s.

The old school of sporting art came to an end in the 1850s when Cooper Henderson became independently wealthy and gave up sporting art.

A wonderful book, originally printed in 1908 and reprinted in 1970, "Old Sporting Prints," by Ralph Nevill, details the rise in popularity and auction prices for popular prints in 1908. It lists most of the titles, subjects and dates as well as sizes.

Serious collectors would do well to search for it, since it is out of print. Copies occasionally surface at antique shows in book seller booths.

It is still possible to discover the early 20th century prints at estate and garage sales for under $100. Shop prices are in the $900 and up range.

Question And Answer

A child's silver-plate fork and spoon have the words "Goosy, Gander" on the handles, with raised goose figures. They are marked Regal Silver Company. What can you tell me about them?
P.S.-Charlotte, N.C.

The Regal Silver Company was founded in 1910 in New Haven, Connecticut. The name was changed shortly after to Majestic Silver Company. Your pieces could be priced at $80 to $100.

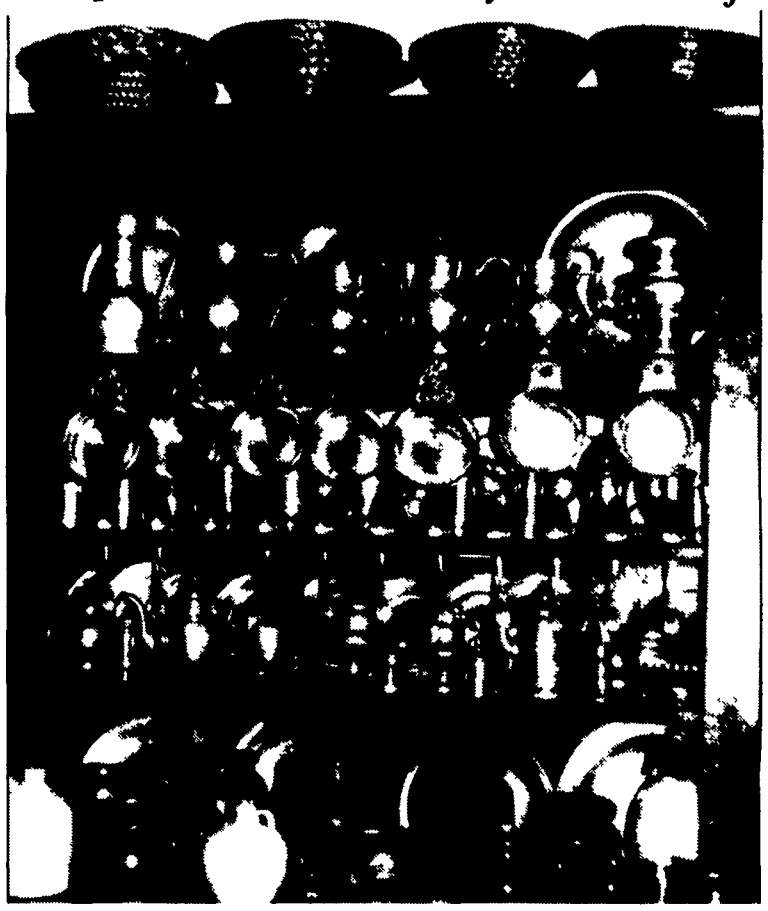
Antique Pewter Details Early American Life



This is one of several cupboards filled with antique pewter in Richard Pencek's home. Pencek says it's difficult to find tankards and mugs that are American made. The pitchers in the top row are all signed American pitchers. The 8-inch plates all bear the stamp of their maker. The porringer bowls have fancy handles or tabs.

Beauty Of Antique Pewter

have surviving pieces identified by their stamp. Sometimes it takes detective work to identify the maker's stamp.

"You really have to look or you'll miss little things with pewter. A lot of it wasn't signed. You really have to be careful of fakes — names and marks of makers were copied, and pewter plates done by Stauffer, for example, were molded so that all imperfections are exactly the same. I read a lot but also listen to a phenomenal amount of people in the field who do the work," Pencek said.

Rare pieces of Pencek's pewter collection accent every room in his house. Pieces include whole sets of footed beakers with spoons, an early 18th century soup tureen, footed plates, slop bowls, several sets of matching candlesticks, teapots, inkwells, coasters, whale-oil lamps, bull's-eye lamps, tavern mugs, and even a pewter casket name plate. Each piece is a museum-quality tribute to the early American pewter craftsman, to the families who kept and used each piece, and to Pencek, antique collector and current caretaker.

Antique Detective Questions and Answers

In your recent column on Windsor chairs, I found no mention of rockers. This Windsor rocker was left to me by my mother. Any idea of worth and age?

M.T. — Dania Beach, Fla.

From your photo, your bow back Windsor rocker could date to 1825. The more spindles, the older the piece. However, it is possible the rockers were added at a later date, something that often happens. To truly date it requires a hands-on appraisal from a specialist since reproductions are still being made. The wide variance of price depends on original finish and parts, and age.

GET THE EDGE ON BETTER BALES

New John Deere 7 Series Round Balers

Now, you can significantly improve the quality of your hay with the new 7 Series Balers from John Deere. Eight new models make solid bales from 32 to 72 inches in diameter. New MegaWide™ pickup sweeps in the heaviest windrow, while famous John Deere Diamond-Tread belts pack tight, dense bales. Plus, new CoverEdge™ net-wrap gives your hay the ultimate in nutritional value and storage protection.

Unlike conventional monofilament net-wrap which leaves four to five inches on each side unprotected, CoverEdge net-wrap extends over the sidewall to hold hay from edge-to-edge. It allows air to circulate inside the bale, yet effectively repels rain and moisture, keeping your hay more palatable, and more nutritious.

Don't compromise the feed value of your hay with an ordinary baler. Stop by and ask your John Deere dealer about the new 7 Series Balers and exclusive CoverEdge net wrap today!

Rockaway Announces Landscaping Tools

JOHNSTOWN (Cambria Co.) — The new Rockaway H-Series shroud is constructed from strong, one-quarter-inch steel, which has been specially flame cut with holes just the right size to keep rocks inside the unit, but allow dirt fine enough for seeding to pass through.

As an added appearance feature, the Rockaway name has also been cut into the steel. This new shroud is designed to take the constant abuse of large, moving rocks with an absolute minimum of bending or denting.

The Rockaway has only two greaseable bearings and one chain. The work of separating out rocks is done by a single, rugged rotor, studded with extremely durable mining teeth arranged in a spiral pattern. Model 6715H fits buckets 60 to 66.5-inches wide. The larger Model 6915H fits 62- to 68.5-inch buckets. The Model 7415 fits 68- to 74-inch buckets.

The same Rockaway can be used on several different buckets of the same size — an important advantage to owners with more than one skid-steer loader. Once fitted to a bucket, it is easy to take on and off, just two pins and two hoses. Landscapers like its ability to level ground. Although the Rockaway performs its rock-picking function in reverse, it is also designed to push small amounts of dirt when moving forward.

Round Baler With Uniwrap System Wraps Up To 50 Bales Per Hour

COLUMBUS, Ind. — The Claas Rollant 250RC round baler with Uniwrap system from Claas of America, combines baling and wrapping in one operation, saving time and labor.

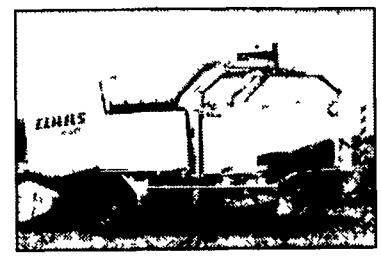
The baler wraps up to 50 bales an hour using one driver, one tractor, and with one pass through the field.

The Uniwrap wrapping system utilizes arms that wrap the bale with prestretched plastic as the bale rotates on a turntable. The 250RC Uniwrap can also be used to bale dry hay and straw and then the wrapping system can be used as an accumulator.

Designed with the Claas Roto Cut system with 33 rotor scrapers and 14 individually protected knives, the Rollant 250RC makes perfectly chopped silage. It provides excellent bale density and easy break up of highly compacted bales. Equipped with 16 all steel ribbed rollers with up to eight reinforcement plates, the Rollant 250RC ensures excellent bale compression even with damp silage.

The baler also features Claas' unique Maximum Pressure System (MPS) for reliable, smooth operation with low maintenance. The MPS rotates the bale earlier and applies steady, strong pressure to the bale, for denser, heavier bales when harvesting in wet or dry conditions.

Other features include a fully automatic tailgate and an 83-inch wide, 4 bar pickup with 32 tines per bar. The large pickup ensures thorough harvesting and even filling of the baling chamber. Dual mounted wheels on the pickup reduce damage to the grass stubble.



The Claas Rollant 250RC round baler with Uniwrap system from Claas of America combines baling and wrapping in one operation, saving time and labor. The baler wraps up to 50 bales an hour using one driver, one tractor, and with one pass through the field.

The Uniwrap system on the Rollant 250RC is completely automatic and wraps up to 50 bales per hour. It quickly and accurately transfers the bale from the baler to the wrapping platform and deposits the bale gently onto the field once bale is fully wrapped. Switch the system to a twin bale drop, and the dual purpose wrapper becomes a bale accumulator to harvest hay and straw.

The Uniwrap system features dual wrapping arms and four wide belts, each with two support rollers that keep the bale in the proper position to provide even stretch wrapping on slopes and at high working speeds. It carries 12 rolls of sheeting and delivers a 52 percent overlap with stretch wrapping and a 60 percent stretching ratio for silage baling. The system is available with double twine tie, Rollatex tying only or with both twine or Rollatex tying.

The C.C.T. (Claas Control Terminal) monitoring and control system is mounted in the tractor and features manual override. It holds up to 20 individual reports.

New Narrow Vineyard/Orchard Tractor From New Holland

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland has introduced another member of the TN tractor family specifically designed for vineyards and narrow orchard operations. This new model brings a number of exclusive features to the speciality, super-narrow tractor market.

The narrow, low-profile design of the TN75V makes it easy to maneuver in tight places, so they're right at home working around trees and vines. Cab tractors have an overall clearance as low as 85.1-inches, so the tractor will fit where other cab tractors can't. Non-cab tractors feature a standard foldable ROPS that makes it easy to get under low branches and overhangs when needed.

The TN75V is powered by a 3-cylinder, turbocharged engine that produces 62 PTO horsepower and features a 16 x 16 Synchro Command™ Plus transmission with fully synchronized mechanical shuttle. The 16 x 16 Synchro Command™ Plus transmission offers a wide range of speed choices — eight speeds in the 2- to 8-mph working range, plus four speeds between 0.4 mph and 1 mph for work that requires low operating speeds.

The TN75V has three rear-remote valves: the first valve has adjustable flow control. Front weight support and six 55-pound weights are standard. Three-point lift-link arms are Category II and convertible to Category I or Category I-N. Adjustable stabilizer blocks control width limits. Engine compartment side-protection shields are also standard to protect valuable branches and vines from damage.

TN75V tractors are available as 2WD or FWD models. FWD tractors feature a conventional front FWD axle and the New Holland exclusive Traction Management System that automatically manages the engagement and disengagement of the FWD axle when traction assistance is needed. This feature allows the tractor to operate at a constant speed during applications like spraying. Electrohydraulically engaged differential lock is standard on both 2WD and FWD models.

Two WD tractors are available without cabs, while FWD units are available with or without cabs. Tractors without cabs have an isolation-mounted platform and foldable mid-mounted roll bar to allow operation in low-clearance and vineyard environments. Cab tractors have a radio-ready, isolation-mounted cab with double doors, opening front and rear windows with washers and wipers, heater, air-conditioning and a rear cab access panel for control/monitor box entrance.

Four tire packages provide the choice of overall minimum vehicle widths from 48.5- to 42.5-inches. In the 48-inch width setting, the TN75V provides a larger tire footprint on the ground than competitive tractors, which is especially beneficial to operators who pull sprayers and implements up and down hills. The larger footprint increases traction and flotation with less ground compaction.

Seedway Hybrids Excel In Corn Trials

HALL, N.Y. — Seedway corn hybrids excelled in the Penn State 2000 corn trials. Hybrids E409L, E538, and E695 each out-yielded every other variety in their maturity zone (one, two, and three respectively) in the silage yield performance tests. Seedway E705 was the highest yielding variety in the zone three grain yield performance test.

This performance is indicative of Seedway's long term commitment to corn hybrid research and regional testing, resulting in an exceptional and diverse silage, grain, and multi-purpose product offering for Northeast producers.

In addition to the outstanding Penn State University trial results, Seedway has available, upon request, demonstration trial data for Seedway and Asgrow grain and silage hybrids, Asgrow soybeans, and silage quality reports.

WTO Upholds Ruling In Favor Of U.S. Beef Industry

WASHINGTON D.C. - A recent World Trade Organization ruling that upheld a decision declaring Korea's import regime to be illegal means U.S. beef producers likely will continue to expand their exports to Korea, the National Cattlemen's Beef Association said recently.

A WTO appellate panel on Monday upheld an August ruling that declared Korea's system of restricting 90 percent of imported beef from retail market channels to be illegal. The panel also let stand a ruling that declared Korea's excessive subsidies to its producers violate its WTO commitment to reduce domestic support.

"This ruling shows that the WTO can be a tool to help foster an environment where international trade can work for U.S. cattle producers," said Dana Hauck, a producer from Delphos, Kan., and chairman of the beef industry International Markets Committee. "We are pleased with the ruling and look forward to expanding demand for our product in Korea."

The case began nearly two years ago when the United States requested WTO dispute settlement consultations with Korea. In April 1999, the WTO formed a panel to review the case after Australia joined the complaint. In August, the WTO ruled in favor of the United States and Korea followed with an appeal.

The panel found that Korea's requirement that imported beef and domestic beef be sold in separate retail stores is inconsistent with its obligations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. The requirement has excluded imported beef from about 90 percent of the 50,000 retail outlets in Korea.

Korea is currently the No. 3 export market for U.S. beef. The decision is an opportunity for U.S. beef producers because under Korea's WTO schedule it is required to end its current quota on imported beef at the end of this year. Korea imports about 202,000 metric tons of beef each year, and nearly half of that is from the United States. "With the end to the quota, that number will continue to grow," Hauck said.

Hafer's Office To Provide Farmers Assistance With Liquid Fuels Tax Returns

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Treasurer Barbara Hafer said representatives from the State Treasury were at the 85th Annual Pennsylvania State Farm Show, returning cash and other assets to attendees and assisting farmers with questions regarding liquid fuels tax returns.

"Whether it's returning unclaimed property to rightful owners or aiding Pennsylvania's farmers," Hafer said, "attending events like the Farm Show help us find people who wouldn't typically find us."

Treasury officials estimate that one in 14 Pennsylvanians is entitled to some of the $602 million on the unclaimed property books. The average claim is approximately $1,000. The property comes from businesses that are required to turn over to the state assets that have been abandoned for seven years. Common types of unclaimed property are dormant bank accounts, stocks or dividends, uncashed payroll or accounts payable checks, uncollected utility deposits, unredeemed gift certificates, and safe deposit box contents.

The Treasury's Board of Finance and Revenue, issues the refunds for taxes paid on fuels used in commercial agriculture. These refunds are authorized under a state law that allows reimbursement of the state tax paid by farmers for gas, diesel, and other fuels. Each year the board processes thousands of claims and returns millions of dollars.

Treasury's information booths will also provide information on other programs such as the Tuition Account Program, AgriLink, Invest, State Contracts, and Small Business Loans.

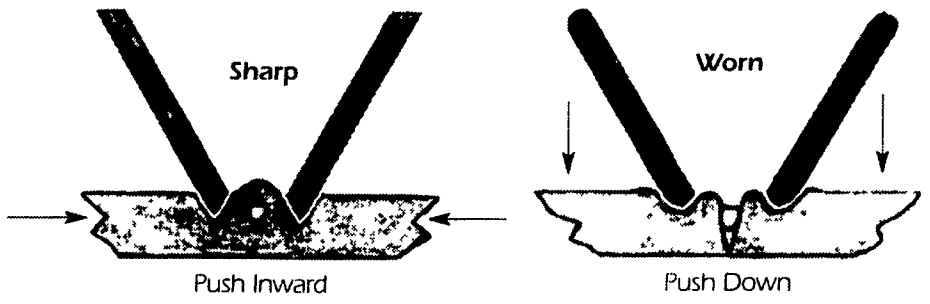
Attention:

Kinze/John Deere Planter & No-Till Drill Owners

Did you know that those old cast iron closing wheels can be reconditioned to "like-new" performance for a fraction of replacement cost?

Now is the time to get ready for tough planting conditions like sod and dry, hard soil. We can help your older planter or drill to close those seed trenches properly. (See illustration)



After all, if a field is worth planting, why not do it right?

Benefits include:

- ✔ Less closing pressure
- ✔ More uniform germination
- ✔ Improved stand population
- ✔ Increased yields

Speed-Change Gearbox
Makes seeding rate changes easier.

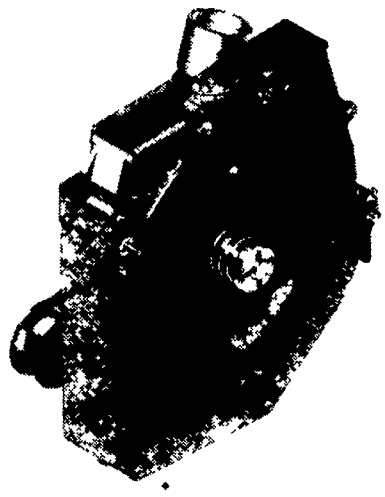
Fluted Seed Cups
Great Plains time-proven metering system will deliver the rate you choose evenly and gently.

T-Handle Depth Adjustment
Makes press wheel adjustments quickly and easily.

Turbo Coulters
Great Plains "Turbo" Coulters are a must in no-till conditions. They cut through the heaviest residue, clearing a path for the opener. The turbo coulter also puts "Tilth" into cold compacted soil helping to warm it and giving roots plenty of room to grow. Great Plains Exclusive turbo coulters penetrate better than conventional coulters.

We Have 10' Units in Stock and Ready for Immediate Delivery.

New for 2001



Great Plains Precision Seeding System™

The revolutionary Precision Seeding System from Great Plains gives you the ability to singulate seed in the furrow while dramatically increasing seedbox capacity over traditional hopper-style planters. Great Plains Precision Seeding Systems are available on the 15' and 30' models and each frame is designed specifically for its width. The Great Plains Precision Seeding System also opens the door to Ultra-Narrow Row configurations

For almost 20 years Great Plains drills backed by Hoober's quality service and parts support have been the perfect combination for maximum productivity.

WINDERMERES BLACK PRINCE

"A Canadian Carriage Horse"
Prince is a three year old gelding that will be four in June He is jet black and has four white socks He was trained to drive by Melissa Deloof and is now fully acclimated as a carriage horse by Stephen and Johnathan Fisher This Canadian carriage horse is stylish and fast enough to be any young mans driving horse yet big, strong and smart enough to be a family's main carriage horse Being as he was trained by a woman, he is very well mannered and would make an excellent carriage horse for a lady

Want Milk?

Four Ways We Deliver More...

#1 More By-pass, More Milk – Weaver's Toasted Beans offer consistently higher by-pass protein cows need to make more milk.

#2 More Production per Protein Unit – Toasting provides consistently superior protein release from every bean, without variations that can tie up amino acids.

#3 More Rumen-Friendly Source – Toasting is gentle. Digestibility is improved. Energy (oil) is retained inside the bean to minimize impact on the rumen.

#4 More of the...

Now you can get more energy, improved palatability, and better digestibility from corn...

Three Inputs Can Directly Affect Corn Yield

Jeff Stoltzfus, center, spoke about different corn herbicide trial rates at the twilight field meeting at the Sylvan Blank farm in June. Producers and ag representatives toured the crop trials at the farm, planted by New Holland farmer Gene Martin.

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Three basic producer inputs can have a direct relationship on yield, according to an agronomy agent who spoke during a young farmer twilight pesticide meeting.

Bob Anderson, Lancaster County crops agent, said the factors are seed, fertilizer, and planting.

When purchasing corn seed, "spend to get the best variety you can afford," Anderson told more than three dozen producers and agri-industry representatives.

Anderson, who spoke at a twilight pesticide meeting at the Sylvan Blank Farm in New Holland in late June, said that growers should purchase the company's "top line, not something cheap.

"It will pay for itself," he said.

Fertilize, noted Anderson, when necessary. If you don't need it, "don't buy it," he said. "You only need so much of it." Fertilizing includes proper liming.

Nutrient Use Advantage To Dent Versus Flint Corn?

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Dairy producers-corn growers have to start putting a "value to what you're growing, instead of thinking it's a 'bushel of corn' or a 'ton of silage,'" said Leland Miller, owner of Advanced Agronomics, an agronomic consulting firm located here.

Miller, who spoke in mid-November to about a dozen Solanco Young Farmer Association members, outlined some advantages dent corn provides over the more popular flint varieties.

In a test conducted in France and published in a leading dairy science magazine, according to Miller, dent corn showed improved percent starch in dry matter compared to flint corn. It also showed marked improvement in other areas, including dry matter and percent starch digestibility.

The dent corn exhibited a 30 percent improvement in starch use by the cow.

Utterback To Speak At Decisions 2001 Conference

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Bob Utterback, ag marketing adviser for Farm Journal magazine, is the featured speaker at the Decisions For the Real Beginning of the 21st Century Seminar Jan. 23 here at the Days Inn and Conference Center.

Paul Knight, Pennsylvania State climatologist, instructor of meterology at Penn State University, and manager of the Weather Communications Group, will also talk. Paul has been the senior forecaster for The New York Times since 1986. Paul is also the producer, co-host, and on-camera meterologist for WPSX-TV's Weather World.

Dan Wolf, president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association, will give his organization's perspective on public policy.

For information on the conference, contact John Berry at the Lehigh County Cooperative Extension office, (610) 391-9840.

Three Inputs

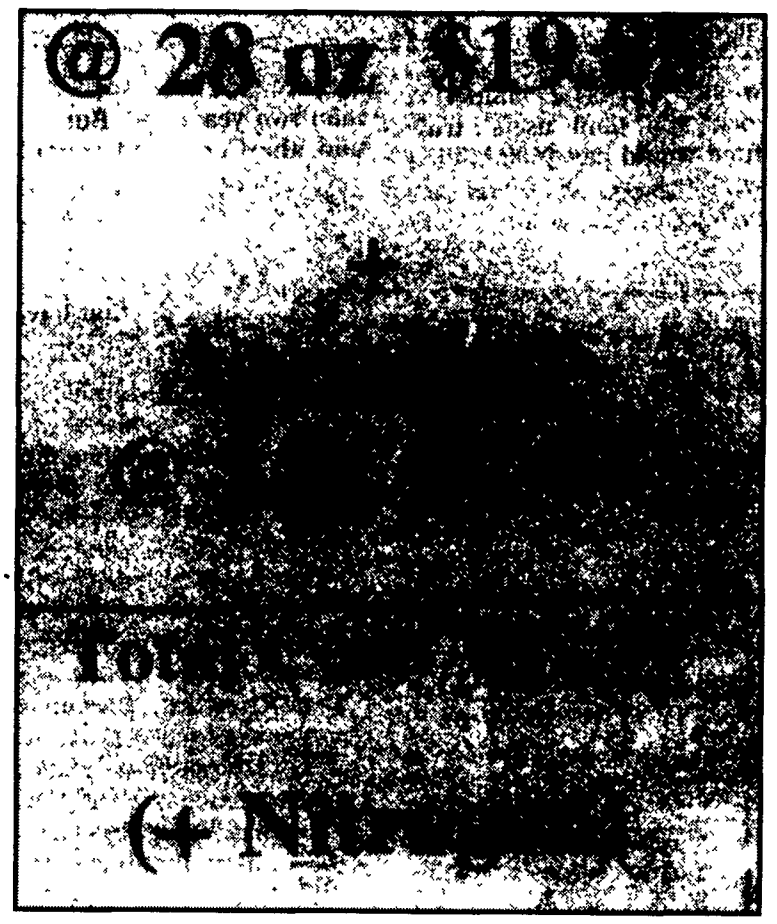
And planting is critical. "Get it planted on time, all the way you can," Anderson said.

Producers and ag representatives toured the crop trials at the farm, planted by New Holland farmer Gene Martin.

The corn was planted May 5 in about two dozen corn plots, measuring 50 feet long by 10 feet wide (four rows across). Martin said he purchased the seed, planted in 36-inch rows at 25,600 plants per acre, but the herbicides were provided by commercial suppliers.



Application rates for herbicides were posted at the plots during the Eastern Lancaster County Young Farmer twilight pesticide meeting.

This is the first year Martin is renting the 55 acres of ground from Blank. Martin, a crop and beef farmer in New Holland, used minimum tillage — a chisel plow.

Martin uses 90 pounds per acre of an 8-24-8 fertilizer. On some fields, he used 21 percent ammonium sulfate at 80 pounds N per acre.

Rootworm controls were placed on some fields. He uses a soybeans-corn-corn-soybeans rotation.

On June 22, the day of the twilight tour, corn had reached shoulder height and looked good.

Producers noted how well the corn stood — at shoulder height — at the Blank farm near New Holland in late June.

The test plots "are pretty representative of what is going on (with herbicide activity) in the area," said one commercial representative.

The plots represent several methods of controlling weeds. Application rates and costs of herbicides were posted.

The marked plots give producers a "ballpark idea of what it costs to control weeds," noted tour coordinator, Jeff Stoltzfus, Eastern Lancaster County Young Farmer Association adviser.

Also, the plots looked at different rates. It's hard to determine, Stoltzfus noted, if half rates work. That depends on several factors — an important one being weather.

Stoltzfus also reviewed the pesticide container recycling program under way in the state. He noted that, last year, more than 50,000 containers were collected for recycling throughout Pennsylvania.

The containers are recycled to manufacture skids.

Drop-off locations can be obtained by calling your local Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture regional office. Region VI office for Lancaster County is (717) 728-2570.

Corn Growers Denounce USDA's Inaction On Upper Mississippi River

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) recently publicly chastised the USDA for its inactivity on the issue of improving the transportation infrastructure on the upper Mississippi River.

Addressing the USDA's Agricultural Transportation Summit in St. Louis, Tim Burrack, a corn grower from Arlington, Iowa, and a member of the NCGA Production and Stewardship Action Team, rebuked the USDA for its failure to fulfill commitments made two years ago.

"In 1998, USDA held a summit similar to this one to determine the transportation needs of American agriculture," said Burrack. "One key point from that meeting was that American farmers saw the dire need for improving locks on the upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers. Two years ago, it seemed the USDA got the message, touting various Memorandums of Understanding with the Department of Transportation and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. It now appears only the Corps has honored those documents."

For several years, the NCGA and other leading agricultural groups have pressed for improvements to locks and dams on the upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers in order to maintain the United States' competitive edge in the global grain trade. Major competitors of U.S. farmers — Argentina, Brazil and China — continue to invest hundreds of millions of dollars into their transportation systems and dramatically reduce their costs for moving grain for export.

The NCGA has actively endorsed the Corps' completion of the Upper Mississippi River Navigation Study. That study will outline the economic and environmental benefits of doubling the size of seven locks from 600 feet to 1,200 feet and lengthening guidewalls on five other locks. The 15-year project would cost $1.2 billion. A lock and dam users' trust fund would pay $600 million with the U.S. Treasury paying the other half.

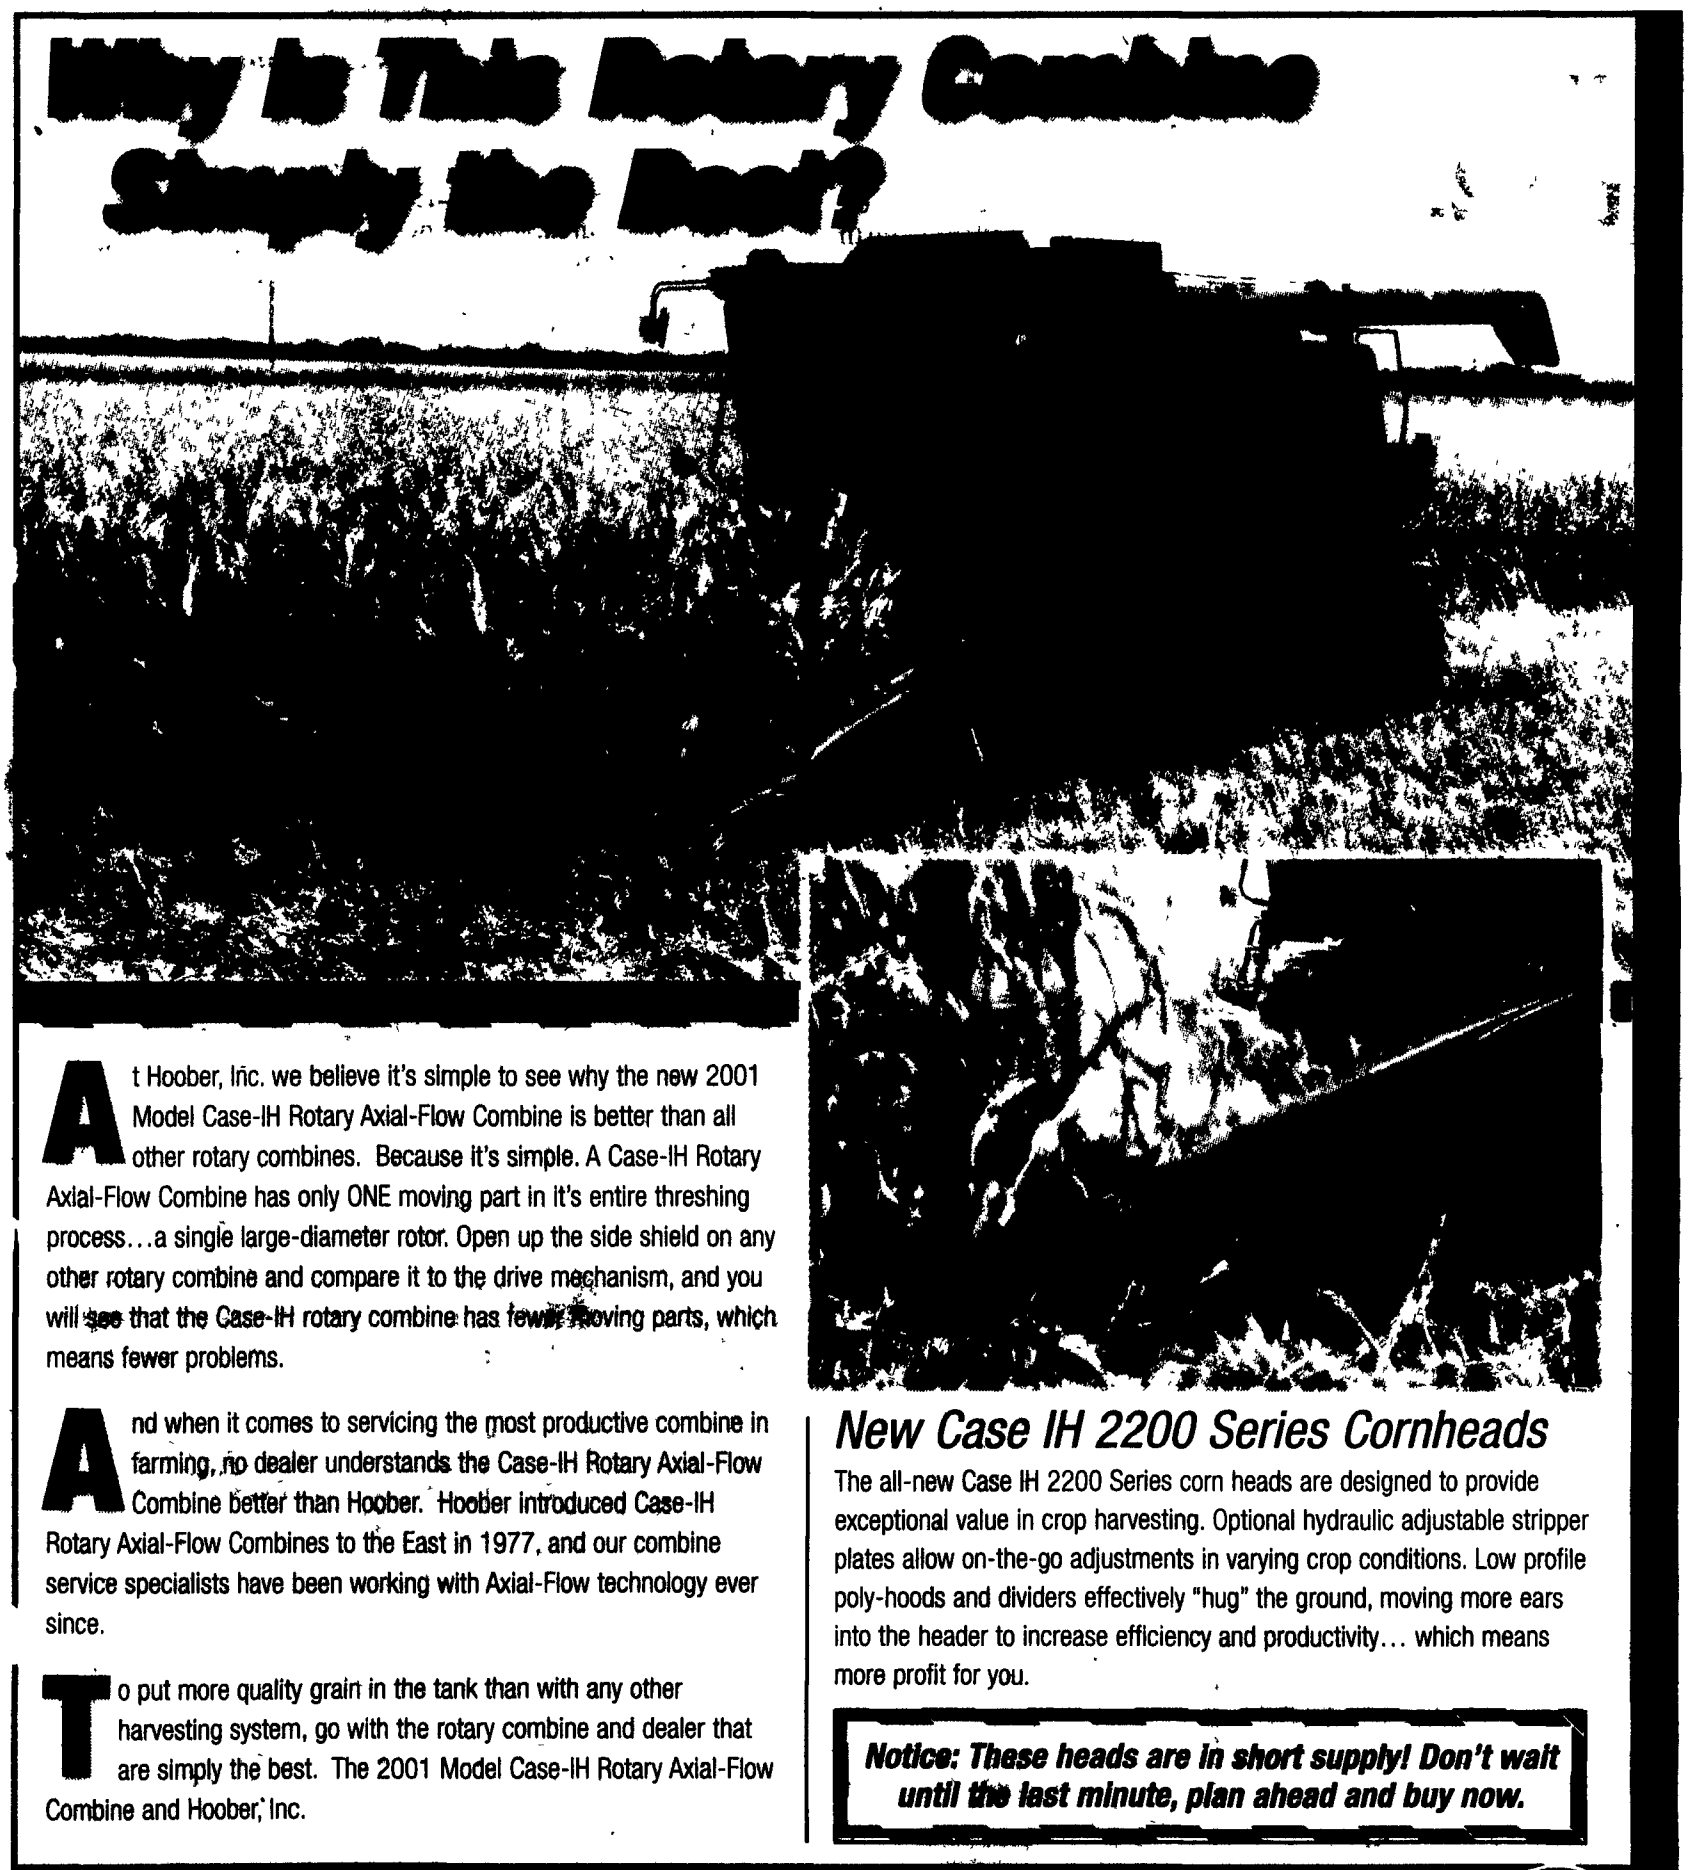
"NCGA is particularly interested in this study because the upper Mississippi and Illinois rivers are the primary artery for U.S. corn and bean exports," Burrack said. "Every year, more than one billion bushels of corn move toward export markets on these waterways."

Since the summit more than two years ago, Burrack said, the Corps and agricultural groups have repeatedly asked USDA to provide information and expertise to the study — requests that have fallen on deaf ears.

"Much of the current debate surrounding economics of the upper Mississippi study could be put to rest if USDA would only commit the resources necessary to find the correct answer," said Burrack. "Instead, we see a USDA that just wants to hold an occasional meeting and perpetuate the myth that it is representing American agriculture."

Burrack pointed out that since the 1998 summit, foreign markets have continued to expand while "the Corps has met the study deadline with delays and USDA has continued to duck its responsibilities as the governmental representative of U.S. agricultural interests."

USDA has been correct in pointing out that the salvation for American agriculture is through foreign trade, Burrack noted. But he warned that if the necessary infrastructure to meet expanding global demand is not put in place, the U.S. is itself opening up foreign markets for its competitors. "If we are going to grow our export markets, USDA must stop ignoring the needs of the upper Mississippi River," he said.



Why Is This Rotary Combine Simply the Best?
At Hoober, Inc. we believe it's simple to see why the new 2001 Model Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combine is better than all other rotary combines. Because it's simple. A Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combine has only ONE moving part in it's entire threshing process...a single large-diameter rotor. Open up the side shield on any other rotary combine and compare it to the drive mechanism, and you will see that the Case-IH rotary combine has fewer moving parts, which means fewer problems.
And when it comes to servicing the most productive combine in farming, no dealer understands the Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combine better than Hoober. Hoober introduced Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combines to the East in 1977, and our combine service specialists have been working with Axial-Flow technology ever since.
To put more quality grain in the tank than with any other harvesting system, go with the rotary combine and dealer that are simply the best. The 2001 Model Case-IH Rotary Axial-Flow Combine and Hoober, Inc.
New Case IH 2200 Series Cornheads
The all-new Case IH 2200 Series corn heads are designed to provide exceptional value in crop harvesting. Optional hydraulic adjustable stripper plates allow on-the-go adjustments in varying crop conditions. Low profile poly-hoods and dividers effectively "hug" the ground, moving more ears into the header to increase efficiency and productivity... which means more profit for you.

Nutrient Use Advantage

cow used the nutrients can be shown by studying the manure. In a test of the manure by Dairy One DHI forage testing lab in Ithaca, N.Y., Miller noted, dent corn showed superior percent starch use and lower percent phosphorus emission — possibly pointing out the nutrient management value of feeding dent corn.

"This was not a scientific study," said Miller, but a simple examination of manure from two suppliers.

But research has shown dent corn can provide improvement in milk production per acre of corn and per ton of silage or grain verses flint.

Flint corn, noted Miller, is common to the area. Miller told the producers at the meeting that seed suppliers can identify the dent versus flint varieties they sell and should provide appropriate information to growers.

A cow eating dent corn consumes more nutrients per acre with lower feed costs compared to flint varieties.

Much flint corn is grown here. The benefits of dent over flint corn are being expressed in several studies, most notably at Michigan State University and the USDA laboratory in Beltsville, Md., according to the consultant.

The digestibility of silage varieties of dent is another tool producers can use. Farmers should concentrate less on how much corn for silage they grow per acre and consider instead the silage's feed value.

Some varieties of corn provide "winners" in general digestibility, too.

At the meeting, Ed Herrmann, Solanco Young Farmer adviser, pointed out the increased cost benefits of using some Bt corn varieties.

On the young farmer test plots, profitability was improved, some cases substantially, by using Bt corn.

Some varieties exhibited a 6-15 bushel per acre difference over non-Bt and worked well to improve the net bottom line.

This year, the new test plot will be at Dale Herr's farm in Kirkwood, Herrmann noted.

2000 Pa. Commercial Hybrid Test Reports

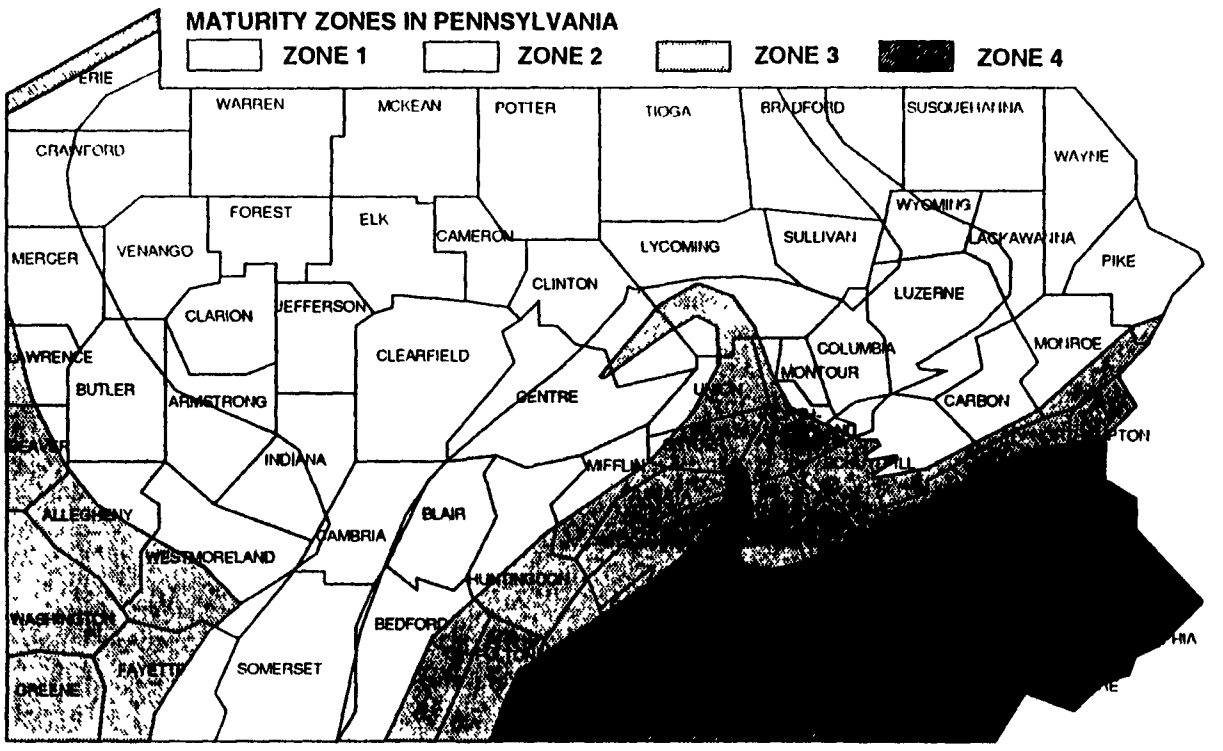
How to Use This Report

This report provides independent and unbiased information for the evaluation of commercial corn hybrids available in Pennsylvania. It should be used to supplement other sources of information, such as seed industry performance tests, other independent testing data, and on-farm performance records when making hybrid selection decisions.

The first factor to consider when using this report is hybrid maturity. The hybrids listed in Tables 1, 3, and 4 are ranked in ascending order by grain moisture with the earliest hybrids (lowest grain moisture) at the top. In Table 2, hybrids are listed alphabetically. Grain or silage moisture is a good indicator of hybrid maturity; those with lower moisture are generally adapted to shorter season environments. Identify hybrids in the list that you know are adapted to your area, and then evaluate new hybrids that have similar moisture contents. Selecting hybrids based on yield alone may result in a hybrid that is too late for your farm. Note that there is considerable range among maturity in hybrids entered in each zone. Once you have identified the appropriate hybrid maturity range, compare the yields of the hybrids that have been evaluated.

Yield performance is variable across locations and is best predicted by using data averaged over multiple locations, so the mean yield over all sites is the best guide to hybrid performance. Individual location hybrid means (Table 2) can help to assess how consistent, or stable, the hybrid was across locations. For example, some hybrids may do well at high-yielding sites but may not do well at low-yielding sites. We DO NOT recommend using data from a single site, even if it is close to your farm, to make hybrid selection choices.

Once you have identified some prospective hybrids, consider their standability from the erect plants column as well as any disease rating data that may have been collected. It also is important to check with a seed company representative about other characteristics of the hybrid that may be important for your operation



Once you have gone through this process, you should be able to select hybrids that have above-average performance. This is an important part of profitable corn production, since, as these reports demonstrate, there is a wide range in the performance of corn hybrids.

Further, we recommend that you evaluate selected hybrids on your farm under your growing conditions and practices. This is the best way to make a final determination of the proper hybrids for your operation.

Tests of commercially available corn hybrids are conducted annually at several locations in each of the four maturity zones in Pennsylvania to provide farmers, seed producers, cooperative extension agents, and other interested persons with information about hybrid performance. This report includes both the grain and silage results from the 2000 season.

Table 1 contains the combined results for all locations harvested in this zone. Table 2 contains the yield data generated at each location. We believe that the statewide performance averages found in Table 1 are most important to consider when making a final decision about variety capabilities, since they represent a wide variety of growing, soil, and management conditions. A two-year summary of results for hybrids tested in both 1999 and 2000 growing seasons is given in Table 3. The results for hybrids entered in the silage performance test are reported in Table 4.

PMCGA, Seed Industry Want Your Membership

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Consider joining NCGA and PMCGA today to be part of a national effort to promote corn and corn producer-related issues.

With our Membership Incentive Program (MIP), corn producers who grow five or more acres of corn can join both organizations with little real cost.

The MIP program works like this:

If you sign up for a three-year joint membership for $75, you can receive a free bag of seed from one of our participating industry partners listed on the form. To get signed up, complete your membership form and send it in to our office at the address listed on the form along with a check for $75 made payable to PMCGA to cover the three-year membership.

Our office will then send your name to the seed company you have selected and a coupon to you indicating you have qualified for the program. You will then be contacted by one of the seed company reps and your seed will be delivered before the planting season.

This is a win-win-win proposition — you get a bag of seed and membership in a large national organization for $75, NCGA and PMCGA get your support, and the seed industry gets to showcase new genetics to key producers.

CORN BITS

NCGA Welcomes Japan/U.S. Feed Tests For StarLink

NCGA welcomed a recent announcement that Japan's Agriculture Ministry agreed to a U.S. plan to test corn destined for Japanese animal feed use to ensure the shipments don't contain StarLink corn.

"We applaud a reasonable solution reached by reasonable people," noted Rick Tolman, NCGA CEO.

His customer-service trip to Japan in early September helped pave the way for Japan's Health Ministry to agree to a USDA testing plan to prevent StarLink from being mixed with food exports to Japan.

That November food agreement was the basis for the recent feed announcement. NCGA continues to exert its influence in the marketing and biotechnology industry.

NCGA sent letters to two major biotechnology providers, thanking the companies for following NCGA policy to withhold technology that has not been approved in the U.S., Japan, and other major international corn markets.

NCGA leadership is continuing to meet with the top management of other biotechnology companies to emphasize the importance of gaining clearances in the 600 million bushel Japanese market and other world markets.

California Waiver Will Not Die

NCGA has received information indicating the Clinton Administration is still considering a California proposal to gut the Clean Air Act by waiving or eliminating the oxygenate requirement.

NCGA has been in contact with administration officials and congressional offices in an effort to get more information on the administration's plans for the waiver. Not all of the data and analysis EPA requested has been analyzed by EPA staff. This analysis would presumably be necessary to support any rule making.

NCGA is very concerned that, with the end of the administration drawing near, waiver approval may be a strong possibility. Growers are urged to contact their congressmen and tell them to put the heat on EPA.

Corn Growers Applaud Plant Genetic Mapping Breakthrough

The NCGA recently applauded the announcement of the completion of the genome-sequencing project for a mustard plant, Arabidopsis.

This is the first complete plant genome sequence and the most complete sequence of any higher organisms, even more complete than the human genome announced earlier this summer.

The National Science Foundation *(NSF), an independ*ent government agency that focuses on funding basic research, made the announcement in Washington, D.C., Dec. 12.

The NSF said the Arabidopsis has become the plant counterpart to the lab mouse, providing clues to how many organisms work and with potential applications in agriculture, energy, and medicine. The mustard plant is a model for more than 250,000 other plant types.

"This is a breakthrough for plant research that will affect all corn growers, and NCGA members can take great pride that it was leadership by NCGA that led to the announcement," said NCGA President Lee Klein. "Wednesday's announcement wouldn't have been possible without NCGA leading the effort to get major funding for the Plant Genome Initiative. Thanks to NCGA, this sequencing project is

Hybrid Test Reports

Procedures

This testing program was available to any producer of hybrid seed corn. For the grain tests, hybrids were planted in paired-row plots equal to 1/500 of an acre. Planting was done with a vacuum precision planter that minimized the number of plants needed to be removed to obtain a final population of 26,000 plants per acre. The planter was set to drop 30 kernels per row. When the corn was 12 to 18 inches tall, extra plants, primarily doubles and end-plants, were removed in order to reach to final population. For silage plots, hybrids were planted, as above, in single-row plots equal to 1/1000 acre. A final population of 28,000 plants per acre was obtained by dropping 32 kernels per row and removing extra plants as previously described. All grain entries were replicated three times in each test while silage entries were replicated four times. Cooperators and planting and harvesting dates are shown in Table 5

Grain-test plots were harvested with a self-propelled combine equipped with electronic instrumentation for determining weight, moisture, and bushel weight (sometimes called test weight). Silage plots were harvested with a forage harvester. Grain yields are reported as bushels per acre, while grain moisture and erect plants are reported as percentages. Bushel weight is reported as pounds per bushel. Shelled grain yields were standardized at 15.5 percent grain moisture. Silage results are reported as actual field yield in tons per acre, calculated on the basis of 65 percent moisture, tons of dry matter per acre, and moisture content at harvest. Disease ratings were based on a scale of 0 5 to 5 0, progressing from little or no disease to premature death

Growing conditions

All locations in this zone were planted by May 17. Planting conditions were excellent at all locations. Growing conditions vary across the zone with most locations having some moisture stress during the grain filling period, which may have contributed to low bushel weight at harvest particularly at the Clarion, Crawford, and Lycoming County sites. The Tioga County location sustained significant damage from standing water early in the season and was not harvested. As an aid to interpreting the data, we are providing growing degree days from the date of planting to the date of harvest or through October 10 whichever occurred first. The data in Table 5 suggest that growing degree days for the 2000 season were only slightly higher than the 30-year average.

Diseases, insects, and other pests

Hybrids grown at the Centre County location were inoculated with the fungus causing northern leaf blight (NLB). There were numerous NLB lesions present on September 16 when entries were rated for disease severity. Northern leaf spot and common rust were also present so the values in Table 2 are reported as leaf blight (LB). Stalk rot, bird damage, and animal damage were not a problem at any location.

Interpretation of results

Least significant difference (LSD) is the tool used to determine if two average values are actually different statistically. The difference between two hybrids must exceed the LSD value to be considered significantly different. Example for yield: LSD = 8.1 Bu/A; Hybrid X = 120.0 Bu/A; Hybrid Y = 105.0 Bu/A; 120.0 – 105 = 15.0 Bu/A difference. Since the difference between Hybrid X and Y (15.0 Bu/A), exceeded the LSD (8.1 Bu/A), Hybrid X was higher yielding due to hybrid superiority and not simply as a result of uncontrolled environmental factors.

Results of the tests for short-season, early medium-season, late medium-season, and late-season hybrids are available as separate reports from county offices of Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Members of the county-based extension staff assisted in conducting these tests. Their efforts were essential to the successful completion of the trials and were greatly appreciated.

The tables in this report may be reproduced only in their entirety.

four years ahead of schedule."

Klein and NCGA member Bob Boeding of Iowa were in Washington, D.C., for the announcement.

"The NCGA knows that the future of the corn industry is written in corn's genetic code," Klein emphasized. "To compete internationally, the U.S. must continually work to maximize yield and minimize yield loss from disease, pests, and the weather without harming the environment. Modern biotechnology, through plant genomics, holds the key to achieving this goal."

Corn Action Teams Meet

NCGA's Grower Services, Production and Stewardship, and Customer and Business Development action teams met the week of Dec. 4 in St. Louis. The Public Policy Action Team met Dec. 15-16 in Washington, D.C.

The Customer and Business Development Action Team conducted a Research Workshop just before its meeting.

Action team chairs reported good attendance, discussion, and planning at each of the meetings.

Membership

As a member of NCGA, you will be part of a 30,000-member national organization that is addressing many of the issues we face in the industry. Issues include corn prices, industry consolidation, environmental issues, and development of new markets for corn.

NCGA also sponsors the National Corn Yield Contest and Commodity Classic. They also send a quarterly newsletter to all members, entitled the National Corn Grower. PMCGA sponsors one or two conferences a year, the Five-Acre Corn Club, Corn Talk, and helps to promote corn issues to the public at many local events.

If you are a corn producer who grows at least five acres of corn, consider joining for three years today and taking advantage of the MIP program. Use the MIP program to look at some new hybrids that some of our seed company partners have available this year. Remember, membership in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) automatically makes you a member in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

On The Mark, Get Set, Grow!

The 6100 Series Rigid And Vertical Fold Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with the White 6100 Series planters. Our pull-type planters feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Its low air pressure, edge-drop seed discs and short, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.

Our 4, 6, 8 and 12 row planters have the flexibility to meet most tillage practices both now and in the future. They're built rugged with a massive 7" x 7" frame and strong, welded-tongue design to handle the demands of heavy residue. Add a 6900 splitter attachment for interplant capability.

This season get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

Top Corn, Soybean Growers San Antonio Bound

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Thousands of corn and soybean growers from across the U.S. will soon converge on San Antonio, Texas, for the premier agricultural event of the year — the 2001 Commodity Classic, Feb. 25-27.

Located on San Antonio's famous Riverwalk, the Henry B. Gonzalez Convention Center will host the combined convention and trade show of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) and the American Soybean Association (ASA).

"Commodity Classic organizers have once again put together a first-class event bringing together the nation's top corn and soybean growers," said NCGA President Lee Klein. "This is a true opportunity for growers to improve their profitability."

Commodity Classic is the premier venue for growers to learn and network with leading innovators in crop production and agri-business industry representatives to improve their efficiency and profitability. The 2001 Classic agenda includes a diverse range of production, education, new product seminars and top entertainment events.

"Commodity Classic helps keep producers on the cutting edge of new technology," said ASA President Tony Anderson. "It is an event that every grower can learn and benefit from by putting the information to practical and profitable use."

Headlining this 2001 Commodity Classic evening of entertainment is the award-winning Oak Ridge Boys, one of America's best-known country acts.

Learning Center educational session topics include variable rate application with remote sensing, sprayer nozzle research and grower spraying accuracy, zone tillage and residue management equipment, environmental regulations that will make growers change practices, future of the Farm Bill, grain utilization and export outlook, making a family farm a family business, and marketing grain on your own or farming the LDP. Learning Center sessions are sponsored by Aventis.

"What Is New" (WIN) product seminars are included, in addition to a huge trade show featuring more than 600 exhibit booths.

Proven First in Soybeans. Now in Corn

As the first genetically enhanced seed available on the market, Roundup Ready® crops continue to make their mark with the growers of America. First with soybeans, now with corn, Roundup Ready has consistently led the way, to bring the most effective options to growers everywhere.

In fact, after only two years on the market, Roundup Ready corn has already proven to be a leader in performance — over 94% of surveyed growers in 1998 said Roundup Ready corn has met or exceeded their expectations.

Plant Roundup Ready corn for performance you can trust.

Roundup Ready® CORN

ALWAYS READ AND FOLLOW LABEL DIRECTIONS Roundup Ultra®/Roundup® will kill plants that do not contain the Roundup Ready® gene. Regulatory approval of grain harvested from seed of Roundup Ready corn is pending in certain export markets and may not be received before the end of 2000 As a result, growers may be restricted from introducing the grain into channels of trade where the potential for export to such markets exist. In such cases, growers must channel such grain for feeding on farm, use in domestic feed loss or other uses in domestic markets only. Growers should refer to Monsanto's Technology Use Guide for information on crop stewardship to avoid the potential movement of pollen to neighboring crops. For assistance in locating domestic outlets for corn grain, view the ASTA web site at www.amseed.org or contact Monsanto at 1-800-768-6387. Roundup Ready® is a trademark of Monsanto Company
